HARD COAL MINERS SETTLE STRIKE

OUTLOOK BAD FOR MARITIME UNION DISPUTE

WEST COAST ISSUES NARROWED DOWN CONSIDERABLY

BY DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, June 7. (AP)—Government conciliators trying to stave off nation-wide shipping tie-up reported encouraging progress tonight, saying the west coast issues "have been narrowed down considerably."

However, a settlement was not yet in sight. Threats of double-header, AFL-CIO strikes on all coasts still persisted and officials were engaged in a feverish round of conferences.

Earlier in the day, word was passed after a White House cabinet meeting that the outlook was "pretty bad."

"Always Hope"

But a west coast operator spokesman, J. B. Bryan, president of the Pacific American Shipowners Association, when asked what he thought of the "pretty bad" appraisal, told reporters tonight:

"Well, there's always hope you know."

STOPPAGE ENDS QUICKLY

San Francisco, June 7 (AP)—A work stoppage which threatened to tie up west coast shipping of all major lines came to an abrupt end late today, when Harry Lundeberg, secretary and directing head of the AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific ordered its members back to work.

Lundeberg appeared on the pier where the Matsonia was berthed and ordered sailors aboard. It appeared departure of the liner for Honolulu, with 565 passengers and 1,600 tons of cargo scheduled for 5 p. m. (PST) would not be greatly delayed.

The union head told reporters the sudden decision to resume work was made because a letter had been received from the Pacific American Shipowners Association asking for resumption of contract negotiations.

The federal conciliators said west coast operators had presented a proposal for applying to their case whatever agreements are reached between east coast operators and the CIO National Maritime Union, a seaman's organization of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The government apparently seeks an agreement first between the National Maritime Union, headed by Joseph Curran, and to use it as a pattern for settling, with appropriate modifications, disputes on both coasts.

Seven unions, all affiliated in the CIO-dominated committee for maritime unity, have similar basic claims. These are for wage increases of 22 to 35 cents an hour and a 44-hour work week.

"Specific details have to be worked out relative to collateral issues," the government progress report said, "and the unions will prepare detailed information on the issues and the (west coast) unions will prepare detailed information on these issues tonight to be submitted to the operators tomorrow morning for consideration."

Bridges Rejects Offer

A dispute between Harry Bridges' CIO Longshoremen and Warehousemen, concentrated on west coast docks, was aired in negotiations for the first time. Bridges met with conciliators and Frank P. Foisie, president of the

"Down With Republic" Shout Of Royalists In Rome And Naples Riots

Naples, June 7 (AP) — Violent demonstrations by several thousand Royalists killed one soldier and injured at least 10 persons in Naples today, while in Rome police clubbed down Monarchists shouting "long live the King!" and "down with the Republic!"

The new outbursts in Naples by House of Savoy sympathizers, dissatisfied with the plebiscite rejecting the monarchy, broke out after fighting late last night in which one person was killed, eight injured and Catholic priests were maltreated. Priests were conspicuously absent from the streets today.

Heavy police guards, reinforced by troops, cruised Naples streets in light tanks and jeeps armed with machine guns. Early tonight gunfire continued and some 50 persons, many of them women, had been placed under arrest.

A soldier riding in the open turret of a tank was killed when police fired a volley into the air in an effort to disperse a crowd near the University of Naples. A hand grenade was tossed during the manifestation, wounding at least 10 persons.

This afternoon leaders of the Monarchist party in Naples, called to police headquarters, asserted they had not organized the demonstrators.

In Rome police used clubs to break up a demonstration by 200 Monarchists in downtown streets.

Socialist minister of the interiro Guiseppe Romita insisted, however, that tranquility reigned in all of Italy with the exception of Rome and Naples. Government sources in Rome denied categorically reports that armed supporters of the king were gathering in Naples.

Crowds surged through the streets of Naples all day shouting "viva!" for King Umberto II as many as 5,000 passed through the railway station on at least two occasions. They shouted also that the plebiscite was fraudulent.

The demonstrators forced stores to close at 10 a. m. in this city where the Royalists outnumbered Republicans 4 to 1 in the plebiscite.

The mistreatment of Catholic priests was said to have been done by persons accusing them of blame for downfall of the Savoy dynasty—a motive which puzzled observers since the church had never been charged with favoritism for the republic.

The Curia in Naples issued a statement asserting the church was beyond the pale of politics and that it was "false to accuse the church clergy for events developing only through the free will of the people of the whole nation."

While the few Monarchists in Rome able to filter past the heavy police cordons shouted outside the Quirinal palace for Umberto to remain in Italy, the King went ahead with his preparations to join Queen Marie Jose and their four children in exile in Portugal.

GREEK DISORDER TO BE CRUSHED

Death Penalty Imposed For Armed Rebels Who Attack Police

BY L. S. CHAKALES

Athens, June 7 (AP)—The Royalist government, opening a drive to crush disorder in Greece, today invoked a drastic emergency decree setting up summary courts empowered to pass death sentences for using arms against authorities or interfering with police.

There will be no recourse from the summary courts, and death sentences will be carried out immediately, the ministry of justice declared.

The decree, which suspends guarantees in the Greek constitution of either a trial within three months or freedom, provides also for a minimum sentence of five years for strikers in public utilities.

The death penalty can be passed also for "moral authors" of action against the state.

Six articles in the constitution relating to the courts were suspended, and police and the military were given wide authority.

The police were authorized to enter premises, homes or business establishments at any hour without a search warrant. Any person can be held in jail indefinitely without bond and without trial.

After the court passes sentence, no pardons, reprieves or probations will be permitted. Military courts will try alleged violators in Northern Greece while civilian courts will prevail in the south.

DELICATE TRUCE BEGINS IN CHINA

Nation Has 15 Days To Decide Peace Or War In Manchuria

BY HAROLD K. MILKS

Nanking, June 7 (AP)—China entered upon one of the most delicate periods in her modern history at noon today—a 15-day truce in Manchuria during which she must unequivocally determine whether she is to have peace or full-scale civil war.

On the Manchurian plain, orders halted a half million opposing government and Communist troops where they stood, so that negotiators here could attempt once again to achieve the peaceful unity that died aborning last January.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's directive to his advancing National troops to cease fire and concurrence by the Communists, prevented the general civil war which had been an hourly threat in the recent disordered weeks.

Whether the new short armistice was 100 per cent effective was not known here in Nanking, 1,000 miles and more from the field. In some isolated sectors it was believed that minor skirmishes might continue among troops who failed to get the word.

The remainder of China still is technically under the armistice arranged last January, although there has been almost constant skirmishing at scattered points.

TERMINAL PAY BILL UNOPPOSED

Men In Armed Services May Get Billions For Lost Furlough Time

Washington, June 7 (AP)—A gentlemen's agreement blocked house action today on legislation to pay billions of dollars to past and present enlisted men for furlough time they didn't get while in service.

The agreement, entered into by party leaders earlier in the week to protect absent members, provided that there would be no roll-call votes today.

The house was all set to pass the so-called terminal pay bill by a thunderous voice vote, no opposition having developed during two hours of debate. But Rep. Brooks (D-La) insisted on a roll-call vote on which the members are recorded individually.

He declined to withdraw his demand after Speaker Rayburn called attention to the no-roll-call agreement, and the house finally adjourned.

The action left the bill unfinished business for next Tuesday, when its passage is virtually assured.

The pending legislation provides for lump cash payments at the time of discharge for enlisted personnel of all the armed services who did not get furloughs to which they were entitled.

It permits accrual of a maximum of 120 days of unused furlough time and provides for payment at the rate of compensation received at the time of discharge, plus allowances of at least 70 cents a day. It computes a man's furlough time at the rate of two and one-half days for each month of service.

Employes Of Liquor Store Charged With Black Market Sales

Detroit, June 7 (AP)—The manager and seven employes of a retail liquor store were suspended today during an investigation into an alleged illicit traffic in state-owned whisky.

An audit of stock in the store, on Cass Avenue in Detroit, disclosed evidence of a black market in liquor, according to Edward H. Besse, in charge of State Liquor Control stores in the area.

Six men were arrested after 35 cases of whisky were found in cars parked in a lot adjoining the retail store.

An audit, according to Besse, showed there was only one bottle of whisky over the store's inventory, indicating that the 35 cases had been received at the store but not listed on the inventory.

Saginaw Lawmaker Calls For Orderly Abolition Of OPA

Lansing, June 7 (AP)—An orderly end to OPA "as soon as possible before it is overthrown in a disorderly manner" was urged today by Congressman Fred L. Crawford of Saginaw.

Speaking before the 25th annual meeting of the Michigan Retail Dry Goods Association, Crawford charged OPA with creating rather than halting inflationary pressure and accused "labor monopolies" with operating to "bring the nation to the brink of disaster."

The association set up a western district, eastern and central-southern district to provide a better local organization. L. D. Mills of Lansing was named president of the organization.

Colonel And Wife Held In $1,500,000 Reich Jewel Theft

BY WILLIAM R. SPEAR

Washington, June 7. (AP) — The army today revealed the arrest of a WAC captain and her colonel-husband in the story-book theft of a fabulous $1,500,000 hoard of jewels and other treasure from a castle owned by the ancient German House of Hesse.

A war department official identified them as Col. J. W. Durant and Capt. Kathleen B. Nash Durant. He said Durant gave his address as the home of his brother, 120 Cameron street, Falls Church, Va., and the WAC the address of her sister, Hudson, Wis.

Two others—a major still on active duty and a corporal who has been discharged—are sought, but their arrest is expected momentarily.

Of the treasure itself—diamonds, pearls, amethysts and royal heirlooms—officials recovered that part which they said was the woman's loot. They placed this at 25 to 50 per cent of the hoard. The rest, they said, went to the colonel. The authorities do not have this portion now but indicated they know where it can be found.

Col. A. C. Miller of the provost marshal general's office and his assistant, Lt. Col. J. S. Myers, unfolded the story at a news conference. They told it thus:

The hoard, in a lead-lined casket within a wooden box, was hidden in the deepest cellar of the 100-room Kronberg Castle near Frankfurt-on-Main, which subsequently was taken over for an officers' rest home.

When Third army troops first moved into the area, thirsty GIs went hunting for liquor in the castle. They found 1,800 bottles of choice wines. Then they found 1,600 bottles of very ancient vintage more carefully hidden near the treasure hoard. The circumstances indicated something else was hidden.

The corporal is alleged to have carried on the search, dug up the jewels and turned them over to the WAC, who was in charge of the rest home. Where the major came in, and just how the hoard was smuggled to this country, were not disclosed immediately.

At any rate the major and the corporal, Miller said, apparently did not get their share.

It was not any tip from those two but the subsequent marriage of the WAC and the colonal, Miller related, that aroused the suspision of army authorities and set them on the trail.

Their marriage was discovered only last Saturday. Authorities went to take them at a small Wisconsin town which Miller declined to identify and where they apparently were honeymooning. They slipped away to Chicago and registered at the ill-fated LaSalle Hotel, scene of a flash fire early Wednesday in which 59 perished and 200 were injured. They were arrested there Monday.

"We probably saved their lives," Miller remarked, "for they were on one of the floors that was burned out."

"Interrogation started immediately," he continued. "By noon Monday she had confessed her share.

"We do not yet have the jewels the colonel admitted having," Miller added.

The two technically had been discharged but were on terminal leave and thus under military jurisdiction. The WAC's leave would have expired May 30 but she was recalled to active duty the day before as authorities pressed their investigation. The colonel then was recalled to active duty after his marriage.

Miller said there was nothing in the previous records of any of the four to indicate any criminal tendencies—until the disruptions of

BREWERY FRAUD DEALS ALLEGED

Three Officials Indicted For Selling Supplies At Inflated Prices

Detroit, June 7 (AP)—Alfred Epstein, president of the Pfeiffer Brewing Co., and two other men were charged with use of the mails to defraud stockholders of two breweries in five-count federal grand jury indictments returned here today.

Besides Epstein, the grand jury named his brother, Elias Epps, and Carleton Smith, a Pfeiffer director and president of Drewry's Ltd., U. S. A. Inc., South Bend, Ind.

Conviction on the charges carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a $1,000 fine on each of the five counts.

The scheme to defraud the Pfeiffer Company involved $572,088, according to Thomas P. Thornton, chief assistant U. S. attorney, and Joseph C. Murphy, an assistant district attorney. They made no estimate of the amount involved in the Drewry transaction.

The indictments charged the defendants with setting up intermediate corporations to deal in Pfeiffer and Drewry supplies at exhorbitant prices, and with collecting commissions on the transactions.

The intermediate firms sold Pfeiffer $2,849,453 worth of supplies at a profit of $572,088 from 1935 through 1943, according to Thornton and Murphy.

Youth, 18, Borrows Money To Marry Grandmother, 79

Louisa, Ky., June 7 (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Delbert (Shorty) Sprouse finally obtained a marriage license today to wed Mrs. Hattie Lyons Large, 79-year-old widow and grandmother of 49 children, after borrowing some money from the prospective bride to provide enough money for the license.

It was young Sprouse's third trip to the county clerk's office in two days. The first time he failed to have the written consent of his parents. The second time he discovered the license cost more than he expected and went back home to borrow the extra money.

Plans for the wedding today were dropped when Sprouse ran into difficulties in finding a minister to officiate. But he said later that "the minister has been taken care of" and that the ceremony would be performed tomorrow at Mrs. Large's home.

The couple expects to start housekeeping in Mrs. Large's home on a farm adjoining that of the Sprouse family. Asked whether he was looking forward to the announced nuptials, Sprouse said, "well sorta." Mrs. Large declined to elaborate, saying, "well, you never know."

A widow for 17 years, Mrs. Large's youngest grandchild is the same age as her prospective husband.

Dr. J. E. Carter who made the blood tests for the couple said she first gave her age as 40, but later said she was 79. Mrs. Large draws an old age pension, which Dr. Carter said would be cancelled if she remarries.

Former CIO Chief In Michigan Named Schwellenbach Aide

Washington, June 7 (AP)—President Truman today nominated John W. Gibson of Michigan, David A. Morse of New Jersey and Philip Hannah of Ohio to be assistant secretaries of labor.

Gibson, former CIO president in Michigan, has been serving as first assistant since the resignation of Daniel W. Tracy, onetime AFL electricians president who has accepted a liaison post with the International Labor Organization (ILO).

Man Who Shouted 'Heil' At Detroit Parade Is Jailed

Detroit, June 7 (AP)— Heinrich A. Linder, 43, was sentenced to 30 days in county jail today for shouting "heil" and giving the Nazi salute when the American flag passed in Detroit's Memorial Day parade.

A psychiatric report, read by Dr. Lennert Wiren, declared Linder was "the type of inadequate individual who responds so well to the Nazi ideology."

Linder came to Detroit from Germany when he was 21 and never became a citizen.

MILK GOES UP PENNY A QUART

General Increase For Butter And Cheese Due Next Week

BY MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, June 7 (AP) — Milk prices were ordered up a penny a quart in a big part of the United States today, heralding a general butter and cheese hike due next week.

OPA put the increase for milk into effect. It excluded a few areas altogether and held the rise to a half cent a quart in some other sections because of previous increases.

The agency also announced that in 2 federal marketing area under agriculture department jurisdiction, the full one cent price boost probably will become effective shortly.

Along with the price hike for quarts of standard milk, OPA ordered these increases in the areas covered:

Coffee cream and other cream with 16 percent or more butterfat, ½ cent a half-pint; half milk and half cream ½ cent a half-pint; pints of standard milk, ½ cent; and ½ cent a quart for skim milk, buttermilk, chocolate milk and other flavored drinks.

In single bottle sales, prices may be rounded to the next highest cent in cases where ceilings figure out at ½ cent a bottle.

Bowles already has ordered price increases of about 11 cents a pound for butter and six cents a pound for cheddar cheese. He estimated that these increases and the cent a quart for milk will cost housewives at least $250,000,000 more a year for food.

Police At Dearborn Cause Kidnap Scare; Now Faces Are Red

Detroit, June 7 (AP)—The Dearborn police department was charged today with responsibility for a kidnap scare and there was plenty of embarrassment to go all around.

It started last Saturday night when a patrolman, responding to a complaint call, took two 12-year-old boys in custody for hurling water-filled balloons at a house. The boys had been left at home to care for the 5-year-old sister of one of them.

The police officer locked the boys up, then went off duty, forgetting them. At 2:30 a.m. Sunday the boys' frantic parents succeeding in locating them. They thought their children had been kidnaped.

A parental protest—to mayor to safety director to police chief—followed.

Discipline was suggested for the offending police officer.

Father Acquitted Of Trying To Kill Baby With Poison

Monroe, Mich., June 7 (AP)—In a 45-minute trial, Russell V. Sharp, 20, of Erie, Mich., was freed today of charges of attempting to kill his week-old child with poisoned milk.

Circuit Judge Clayton C. Golden, hearing the cast after Sharp waived a jury, found the defendant innocent after listening to medical testimony that the youth suffered "personality defects" and was "mentally ill at the time the act was committed."

The court recorded a statement attributed to Sharp in which the latter was quoted as saying he fed the baby poison in its milk Jan. 27 to make it ill in an attempt to frighten his estranged wife. The child recovered.

FUEL DIGGERS RETURNING TO WORK MONDAY

WELFARE FUND MAY COST 60 MILLION PER YEAR

New York, June 7 (AP)—John L. Lewis' AFL United Mine Workers today gained a new contract with anthracite operators providing for an 18½ cents an hour wage increase and a health and welfare fund, the combined concessions of which will cost the operators an estimated total of $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 a year.

The 75,000 miners, who have been on strike in the Pennsylvania hard coal fields for the past week, will return to work Monday, Thomas J. Kennedy, UMW secretary-treasurer, said in announcing the new contract at a news conference.

A spokesman for the operators estimated the increased overhead from the new contract would add approximately $1 a ton to the retail price of anthracite—used chiefly for home heating.

The health and welfare fund—to be financed by a five cents a ton royalty on all hard coal mined—would amount to $2,700,000 on the basis of last year's production.

New Concession Won

The agreement as announced by Kennedy closely parallels the contract the UMW signed in Washington with the government for 400,000 bituminous coal miners recently.

An 18½ cent an hour wage boost and a health and welfare fund were won by the union in the soft coal negotiations.

The NMW, however, won a concession from hard coal operators in the health and welfare fund which it did not obtain from the government. Under the agreement the fund will be administered by three trustees—two of whom will be named by UMW President John L. Lewis and a third by the operators.

The soft coal agreement provided for one trustee selected by the UMW, one by the government and a third selected by the first two.

Vacation Pay Increased

Also included in the new contract is a provision for vacation pay of $100 instead of the present $75 for 10 days' time off.

That point also was included in the bituminous agreement.

Although the hard coal miners will be paid their vacation pay this summer, Kennedy said the miners had agreed actually to take off only four days—July 4-7 inclusive. Such a limitation was not written into the soft coal agreement.

UMW wages in the anthracite field now range from an average 98 cents an hour for outside workers, $1.05 an hour for inside workers and $1.19 for miners.

The 18½ cents an hour raise means $1.29½ cents more for the seven-hour day.

Week Unchanged

The present five-day week was continued.

Also continued was the present policy of a sixth day's work being optional. If that sixth day is worked the miner receives time and a half.

The new contract provides for eight holidays a year in addition to vacation time instead of the present six. Kennedy said the operators had agreed to accept the

LOCAL MAN IS INJURED HERE

Felix St. Peter Struck By Car Early Friday Morning

Felix St. Peter, 48, of 916 First Avenue South, was injured about one o'clock Friday morning when he was struck by a car driven by Clifford Fillion, Gladstone, Rt. 1, in the 100 block of Stephenson Avenue, who was traveling north on the avenue. St. Peter who was crossing the street, was thrown over the right front fender of the car by the impact and was taken to St. Francis hospital in an ambulance.

Police officers who investigated the accident said that Fillion had stopped at the intersection of Ludington and Stephenson to pick up Edward Robert, also of Gladstone Rt. 1, and that the mishap occurred a few minutes later.

It was raining at the time of the accident and a check-up of the brakes on the Fillion car revealed that they were in good condition. The driver was not held.

X-rays revealed no broken bones but doctors said that St. Peter was badly cut and bruised.

In another accident Thursday night cars driven by Alyce M. Holmgren, Rapid River, and Mrs. Leonard Anderson, 716 Fourth Avenue South, were slightly damaged in a minor collision in the 1300 block of Ludington street.

Two other automobiles were slightly damaged in a third accident at the intersection of Ludington and 14th street Thursday. The machines involved were driven by Gertrude Sheahan, 223 North 10th street, and Mrs. Archie Dubord, Flat Rock.

Red Buck Scout Camp Vacancies Virtually Filled

Reservations for Red Buck Scout Camp at Red Jack Lake, have come in in such numbers during the past week, that nearly all vacancies are filled. Period two, three, and four are filled. These three periods run from July 7th to July 27th. Period one, running from June 30th to July 6, has only ten vacancies left, and period five, running from July 28 to August 3, does not seem to be quite so popular, having only ten reservations in. Figures on reservations at this date, total 228.

Periods filled to overflowing thus far, may have some shifts in them from the various troops now registered, in order that all Scouts may be adequately taken care of. Facilities at Red Buck, at the present time, will accommodate only fifty Scouts. Five periods were set up by the camping committee at one of their meetings, with a sixth to be added if necessary. No camp period will be operated unless there are forty reservations at the time scheduled for opening any one single period.

Troops not completing their reservations thus far, are urged to do so, as soon as possible, in order that proper arrangements can be made for accommodations.

1500 Visit USES Offices In Month

Nearly 1500 individuals visited the local USES offices during the month of May, James M. Damitz, office manager, reported today. Included in this total were 1100 veterans, 142 of whom made their first visit to the office since their release from active duty.

A total of 160 persons, of whom 91 were veterans, were referred from this office to discuss job opportunities with local employers. These referrals resulted in 66 placements, 32 of whom were veterans.

Approximately 500 discharged veterans are seeking work in this community. This comparatively low number is due to the fact that many veterans have signified their intention of returning to school or taking back their old job with a former employer. Another factor which merits consideration is the apparent lack of transportation which makes getting to and from work difficult for applicants from outlying communities. Roughly, one-third of the veterans registered with the USES are in a skilled classification.

The great majority of unfilled job openings are in the woods industry, and though work of this sort pays the prevailing wages, the difficulty of getting to and from the location of this work and other factors, makes the jobs difficult to fill.

All employers are urged to list their job openings with the USES so that job opportunities may be discussed with returning veterans and others desiring work in this vicinity.

The USES community advisory committee held its first meeting Thursday night in the local employment office.

This committee composed of an equal number of both labor and management was formed to assist the USES in carrying out its six-point program which is briefly: 1. Supplying labor market information; 2. Adequate job counseling; 3. Special service to employers; 4. Job placement services; 5. Special services to veterans; 6. Cooperation with other agencies.

James M. Damitz, local office manager, pointed out the problems that were being encountered in job development which included surplus labor such as discharged veterans and war workers. He also went on to point out the responsibility of the USES in carrying out the six-point program listed above.

Elmer Olson, veterans employment representative, explained the method used in registering new applicants and also the procedure involved in filling job orders. He also explained the methods and techniques used in the counseling of handicapped veterans and applicants with little or no work history.

Spencer C. Mathison, veteran claims examiner, spoke on the benefits of the serviceman's readjustment allowance and the qualifications needed to be eligible. He commented briefly on reasons for disqualifications and the penalties involved.

Members of the advisory committee are Einar Beck, B. B. Sommers, Roy Overpack, Arnold Alsten, Hector Berglund and L. Hermanson.

MEDICAL MEN

There are 139,309 physicians in active practice in the United States in normal times; 42,154 of these are specialists, with 12,152 of the number being surgeons.

Seedling Shipments Reach New Record

Lansing—Windup of the seedling-tree shipping season at conservation department nurseries confirms an all-time record for seedling shipments, with a grand total of nearly five million trees shipped in about 2,000 separate orders. Less than one-fourth as many were shipped in the spring of 1945.

Farmers who had been putting off their tree planting during the war years took full advantage of the first spring in which they could spare time and labor, and bought two million more trees than in the year before. The conservation department itself planted extensively for the first time since before the war — in parks and state game areas but not in state forests. Other state agencies used 350,000 trees county road commissions planted 110,000 and school children set out 445,000 in school forests.

PRIVATE FLYING IS NEGLECTED

Aviators Are Waiting For Better Small Airplanes

By PETER EDSON

Washington — (NEA) — While aircraft industry representatives in Washington are busier than a flock of hawks over a chicken ranch, lobbying for a new big-time national air policy bill, the development of private flying goes practically neglected.

The principal argument of the aircraft industry is that it must be kept strong—presumably by government spending—so that it will be able to produce military aircraft at the 50,000-a-year rate when the need arises. Yet, with a few exceptions, this same industry is doing little or nothing to keep itself strong by catering to the needs of potential private flyers, of whom there are literally hundreds of thousands.

All these would-be private flyers are waiting for are better small planes. A certain amount of needling goes on all the time by Civil Aeronautics officials, trying to persuade manufacturers to do research that would make the airplane as popular as the automobile. But so far it has done little good.

Studies by these same officials reveal that most of the 1946-model planes now offered for private sale are little better than the 1941 models. They cost too much, they have too little utility value, they are inconvenient, they display insufficient advance in safety. They are noisy, the seats are uncomfortable. Passengers inside the cabin have to shout at each other to be heard, and a two-hour joyride is about all most private flyers can take.

Considered a Nuisance

Most small planes still require too big a field for take-off and landing. What's more, middle- and upper-class suburbs, where most of the potential private plane owners reside, don't want a private flying field in the neighborhood because of the noise. In short, the private plane is still considered more of a nuisance than a necessity, and not nearly enough of a sporting proposition. The aircraft industry has a job to do in correcting these impressions.

The small plane's lack of safety is shown in government accident figures. From 1938 through 1943, one out of every 115 privately licensed planes was involved in a fatal accident. One out of every 49 such planes was demolished in an accident. One in every seven was involved in an accident which necessitated major repair.

Says the typical small plane flyer, "Too many carburetors ice up too easily. Too many engines quit on a normal glide. Too many small planes stall out on a quick turn. Too many planes don't have enough side, or front, or rear, or up, or down visibility."

Manufacturers Know

Suggestions, polls, surveys, and special articles by the score have given a consistent pattern of the plane a private flyer wants, and would buy if he could get, says T. P. Wright, Civil Aeronautics Administrator.

It is a four-place job of moderate speed, simplified control, and better take-off and landing performance. It should have wings that fold or are easily removable. This would not only reduce hangar rentals, but also make the plane more roadable on the ground, and so eliminate the need for an automobile at each end of the flight. Such an airplane could be hangared and serviced at home —not staked out in a pasture where the cows could eat the fabric, or at an airfield at a dollar a day, plus $3.50-an-hour mechanics' pay. Finally, this ideal plane would sell for less than $2500.

Manufacturers are inclined to say that these specifications are visionary, impractical, unrealistic, impossible. Such a plane today would cost from $3000 to $18,000, and hence would appeal only to the private yacht trade. Such planes are still in the luxury class. They are used fewer than 100 hours a year, and the cost of operation is more than $10 an hour.

As long as the private plane stays in this luxury class, the aviation industry is bound to have more ex-plane owners than owners. The industry is unique in this respect—having so many ex-customers who aren't customers any more because of dissatisfaction.

Until the industry can get busy and produce private planes that will overcome these objections, naturally the manufacturers will have to rely largely on government subsidy, Army and Navy buying, and the business of the commercial airlines to keep going.

Over 5 Million Man-Days Of Work Done By Conchies

By DOUGLAS LARSEN

Washington (NEA)—For only $1.26 a day the American taxpayer has received more than 5,388,700 man days of work from conscientious objectors since the start of the war, according to National Selective Service.

This was work on soil conservation, road building, growing food and many other jobs—work that the taxpayer would have paid for anyway—including valuable volunteer work as guinea pigs in medical experiments. It saved the Treasury of the U. S. about $18,000,000.

This estimate is based on Department of Labor figures as to what the same work would have cost if the Government would have had to pay for it in the usual way. And it doesn't include an estimated $2,000,000 which individual States saved by the work conscientious objectors did in hospitals and asylums. This accounts for every cent Selective Service spent on its handling of the conscientious objector program. And the work figure was actual work done; kitchen labor or other administrative duties connected with the CO camps wasn't counted.

Little Bitterness

The man largely responsible for turning what was a scandal of World War I into something that actually helped the taxpayers in World War II, with as little bitterness as possible for all concerned, is Col. Lewis F. Kosch.

A World War I artillery officer and instructor in France, Kosch was a classmate of Draft Director Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey at Tri-State College in Angola, Indiana. They have been close friends ever since. Kosch is a heavy-set man with close-cropped hair and a little hard of hearing in his right ear, caused by being close to too much artillery fire. He was a director of a number of CCC camps before the war. Outwardly he looks like what he was —a hard-boiled artillery officer. Actually he has done a very diplomatic and sympathetic job with a problem which is the potential source of a great deal of hard feeling.

Based on his experience, Col. Kosch estimates that about 95 per cent of America's conscientious objectors had sincere religious beliefs which kept them out of the Army. The other five per cent, he thinks, were various shades of fakers. They were the troublemakers, the ones who refused to work at times, and the ones who would have been in trouble no matter what they were doing. It was up to the local board to decide whether a man came under the legal classification of a conscientious objector. They were then handed to Kosch's care.

Selective Service's handling of CO's was new with this war. Last war they put them into the Army —or jail—and it was up to the Army to give them jobs which kept them out of actual combat. When Kosch took over the job he tried to go back to the draft files of World War I, but found not one usable record for guidance in the handling of conscientious objectors.

Lew Ayres

Kosch's most highly publicized case was that of movie actor Lew Ayres. Kosch reveals that Ayres never did want to become a conscientious objector. When he was inducted he asked to be made a medical corpsman, which was known to be one of the most dangerous of all war jobs. But they told him he would get some kind of assignment in the category classified by a Presidential Order as non-combatant. Ayres knew by reports from action in Africa that many men in this classification actually had had to take up arms and kill or be killed.

Ayres then agreed to go to a CO camp, according to Kosch. As soon as the Presidential Order was changed to limit the non-combatant classification to medical corpsmen duties, Ayres asked to be inducted into the Army. He was, and became a hero, redeeming himself in the eyes of the public. Kosch's sympathetic handling of the whole matter helped iron it out.

There were approximately 11,000 conscientious objectors all together. About 7,000 have been released from camps due to age, length of service and for dependency reasons. Most of the current trouble over the release of so-called conscientious objectors is over the men who are in jail because they refused to report for induction.

Approximately 20 per cent of all COs were college men.

Col. Lewis F. Kosch: In World War II, he repaired a scandal of World War I.

A Challenge to Humanity

THE "public be damned" attitude that has characterized the activities of some of the most powerful labor unions of the country in recent weeks is again evidenced in another great labor crisis, the threatened walkout of maritime unions affiliated with the AFL and the CIO. While hundreds of thousands of persons, men, women and children, face the threat of starvation abroad, the seamen of America choose this opportunity to quit their jobs and seal the doom of these unfortunate victims of the greatest, most tragic war in world history.

Is this the kind of better world for which our war heroes fought and died?

Further evidence of the arrogance and lack of human compassion by the maritime unions is indicated in their announcement that they would treat Navy and Coast Guard personnel as strike breakers if they try to operate union ships while the seamen are on strike.

Most of the ships in the American maritime service and owned by the federal government, which proposes to sail these ships with service crews to guarantee the fulfillment of American commitments to the starving people of other lands, if maritime workers refuse to do the job.

We have obviously reached a point in our political and economic history at which the powerful unions openly defy the government and the people of the United States, and say, in efect, that they are in reality the rulers of the land.

Will we meet this challenge, or sell out our heritage to a ruthless unprincipled group of men who are quick to put their selfish interests above the lives of hundreds of thousands of their fellowmen? That is the issue now before the people of the United States.

More Parking Lots

THE report of the proceedings of the meeting of the Escanaba city council Thursday night reveals that the city has been making a serious effort to solve the shopping district parking problem.

The city is endeavoring to acquire vacant lots adjacent to Ludington street for free parking space. It might justifiably go so far as to purchase unsightly, ramshackle bluldings, tear them down and provide additional parking lots thereby.

Iron Mountain and Marquette have installed parking meters to assure a more equitable use of available space in the business district. It is one way of curbing motorists who "hog" the space and at the same time obtain additional revenue for the city treasury. It also eliminates the distasteful police responsibility of having to issue tickets to visitors, as well as local citizens, who stay overtime in the parking stalls.

Many motorists, however, dislike paying tribute to the parking meters. Much of the dissatisfaction, inherent in both methods for handling the problem, can be eliminated by providing adequate parking space in lots well distributed throughout the shopping district.

Juvenile Crime Wave

THE often-predicted postwar wave of adult and juvenile crime appears to have finally hit Escanaba.

Five robberies, committed last week, have been cleared up with the arrest of two 12 year-olds. Additional burglaries this week appear to have been the work of older persons.

Inspiration for embarking on a career of crime at an early age was obtained by the 12-year-olds from the crime stories in the movies, radio and comic books. While all these mystery tales present the moral that "crime does not pay" the youngsters apparently didn't get that lesson from it.

These are times when youngsters have much money to spend. Those who are not able to obtain it from their parents or by work are sorely tempted to get their spending money by robbery and other unlawful means. It's the old lure of easy money.

Juvenile delinquency can be curbed by intelligent handling of children in the homes, schools and churches. Supervised recreation and other character building activities are helpful. When these agencies fail, the police are presented with the responsibility of arresting the youths and turning them over to the juvenile courts. It is so much better, of course, if delinquency can be prevented earlier.

Steam Rates Raised

CUSTOMERS of Escanaba's steam heating utility will have to take an increase in rates, ranging from six to 16 per cent, as a result of the action taken by the city council Thursday night.

Doubtless, the heating utility customers expected it, for since the increase in prices of coal and other materials the past few years they have been enjoying a highly favorable rate for this luxury heating service. In fact, the city has on file more than a dozen requests for the extension of service to other business buildings on Ludington street.

Central heating provides the customer with a dependable, quick service, without the nuisance of firing of furnaces, removal of ashes and other chores. Because of the limited capacity of the plant, steam is supplied only to the business district, much to the disappointment of many potential residential users. In Virginia, Minn., virtually every home and commercial building obtains its heat from a municipal utility. It goes without saying that the Virginians like the service.

The Tipping Evil

OUR hats are off to the Pere Marquette railroad, which has announced it will put an end to the custom of tipping on dining cars. It is to be hoped that the PM's crusade will be taken up by other railroads as well as other institutions that are serving the public.

The tipping evil has been severely aggravated in wartime. In recent years, travelers in Florida and other congested places have been obliged to slip a good-sized bill to the railway or airplane ticket agent for the privilege of buying transportation. Incidentally, the C&O Lines, which include the Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate railroads, just recently launched an attack on the block booking of Pullman space, another travel evil.

The Pere Marquette is on the right track. There would be much more satisfaction all around if the tipping practice were generally discarded. Patrons then would pay for value received. The employers would pay their help adequately, and the employes would not be placed in the somewhat degrading position of being obliged to accept such gratuities in order to make a decent and honest living.

Tipping has become a racket in many instances, anyway. The night club patrons, who tip the pretty hatcheck girl, are actually giving their money to some shrewd operator who has purchased the checkroom concession. The generous tipper is oftentimes just a sucker.

FORESTS CAN BE PERMANENT
(Milwaukee Journal)

Private and industrial forests are fine. They mean that individuals or groups make investments, take risks, engage in constructive forestry.

But private or industrial forests are not necessarily permanent. There is, for instance, the case of the Tomahawk Kraft Paper Co.

Its stock was more or less widely held. Unexpectedly, a New York group began to buy it up. There was a quick effort by some of the company's officers to induce the Bemis Bag Co. of St. Louis to compete for the stock. A scramble to gain control followed. The New York group later announced that it had won out.

Will that group continue to plant trees, hold timber, carefully control cutting on the company's forest holdings? Or will it use the pulpwood that is available for early profits and thereby destroy one of the most promising private forest operations in Wisconsin?

This is no charge that it will do the latter. But on any charge of control the question does come up. A new management may not have the forest viewpoint that has been developed in Wisconsin and has been forstered by such organizations as Trees for Tomorrow, Inc.

County forests, meanwhile, are likely to become largely permanent provided politics can be curbed in Wisconsin counties. At present most counties are grimly determined to hold their forests, practice good forestry in them, and sell only as much stumpage as will equal the annual increment—that is, keep the forests perpetually producing.

So, while industrial forests ought to be encouraged, county forests are perhaps the only assurance of permanent development in the north.

IS "ENVELOPE" FRENCH?
(Scrapbook Item)

I feel sure that the average person will be surprised to learn that "ON-vel-ope," for envelope, has very little dictionary sanction. First of all, "ON-vel-ope" was more or less the vogue in England about two cenuries ago. It sprang from the traditional British ineptness with the French language: (1) "envelope" was believed to be a French word; (2) "On-vel-ope" was believed to be the French pronunciation. Neither assumption was correct.

The truth is that: (1) "envelope" is an English word which evolved from the French "envelope" (note the two "l's") (2) the French pronunciation is "ah(n)-VLUP," with the nasal vowel in the first syllable.

The early American pronunciation of the noun envelope was exactly the same as for the verb: en-VEL-up. It was Noah Webster's only choice (1828). However, 'en-VEL-up" for the noun is now obsolete or dialectal in America, though some dictionaries still lisnt it. Surprisingly, "en-VEL-up" for the noun is still the first choice of the Funk and Wagnalls and the New Century dictionaries. They list "EN-vel-ope" as second choice.

Here is a real picture of the "ON-vel-ope" pronunciation according to seven accepted American dictionaries. It is listed only as second choice in three, Merriam Webster's, Thorndike Century, and Kenyon and Knott's.

The pronunciation EN-vel-ope is best American usage. Of the seven dictionaries, five list EN-vel-ope as first choice, and two list it as second choice.

"ON-vel-ope" is neither French nor English. Kenyon and Knott stigmatize it as "pseudo-French." Pseudo- is a long-haired term meaning "phony."

An even greater phony is the pronunciation "ON-voy" for the word envoy. Even if envoy were a French word, which it is not, no Frenchman would ever pronounce it "ON-voy." Better say EN-voy.

Ability to identify the eight PARTS OF SPEECH is essential in speaking and writing correct English. My pamphlet gives you a simple key to nouns, verbs, adjectives, etc. For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Frank Colby, in care of this paper.

World Events Analyzed

BY MARQUIS CHILDS

Washington—The damage that President Truman did by his offhand press conference statement on the threatening Maritime strike was considerable. If nothing else, it was a tactical error.

The President said everything would be done to keep the ships running if the strike occurred. The unions interpreted that to mean the ship operators could hold out as long as they wanted to, knowing that eventually the strike would be broken by government intervention.

Childs

It would have been so easy to put it another way. The President could have said what his secretary of labor said—that the ships must run because of the desperate need for food from the United States. No one could have quarreled with that. It would not have sounded intemperate and partisan.

—STRIKE A WEEK AWAY—

But that is water over the dam. What is important today is that with the strike only a week off no method has been worked out for clearing relief ships. Apparently no way can be worked out.

In response to an inquiry, an officer of the union said a committee had been formed to work out a clearance system with UNRRA. Then just the other day Harry Bridges and Joseph Curran, joint bosses of the new seven-union combine, announced they would designate what ships would be cleared by the union.

Those who know shipping say that few ships are given over entirely to relief cargoes. UNRRA sends out ships which carry out only coal or only wheat. But UNRRA is only about 20 per cent of the total operation. The balance is often carried with mixed cargoes to France and other nations that are paying for it but need it none the less desperately than the UNRRA nations.

The present interval between harvests is the most critical period in the whole relief operation. By the end of August there will come what Herbert Hoover has called a "breathing spell." Then it will be possible to appraise the degree of relief coming from local crops.

If shipping is interrupted even temporarily the damage will be incalcuable—incalculable in terms of human lives. If the strikes go on to a prolonged contest, then hope of world stability will be slender indeed.

The record of the Maritime unions during the war was excellent. There were no strikes. Thousands of ships with war cargoes went through the unending peril of the seven seas. The casualty list of merchant seamen was high.

—RECEIVED WAR BONUSES—

During the war they received bonuses based on the zone in which their ship sailed. As the bonus system was modified, when the peril relaxed toward the end of the war, the seamen were given at least partial compensation in a war labor board award.

You do not have to look hard to find the political significance of the coming strike. That is particularly true in light of the appeal to the world federation of trade unions to brand as "scab" all ships operated during the strike. Incidentally, there are reports that Bridges and Curran were not in agreement on the appeal to the WFTU.

The WFTU includes the central organizations of both Russian and British trade unions. The British had their reservations but they finally went into the organization. It includes the CIO and the extreme left unions of France.

At the United Nations session in London last winter a strenuous effort was made to obtain for the WFTU the status of a member nation. This was backed by the Soviet delegation. It was fiercely resisted by the A. F. of L. and publicly denounced by Senator Connally as a member of the American delegation.

From that time on, the suspicion has grown that the WFTU was being shaped as an instrument of Russian foreign policy. You can readily foresee the consequences if the organization responds to the appeal. Organized labor in various parts of the world will be alerted against the United States—specifically against the government of the United States since the government will be operating the ships.

This can do great harm. It can damage the prestige of this country among those who know nothing of the real issues. If there is any reasonable way to compromise the issues, they must be compromised. Warfare between the government and labor would serve too well the purposes of those who want to discredit this country before the world.

CHEMICAL BEES — Chatting with Atty. Charles Lewis about gardens the other day, he reported not without pride that his tomato plants have twelve green tomatoes on them—which is certainly rushing a backward season. And the prospective ingredient for his bacon and tomato sandwich didn't just happen to get an early start. Atty. Lewis gave nature every encouragement from early planting, nightly coverings — and the use of a manufactured chemical dust for early pollination of the first blossoms.

Dunathan

This last idea was the suggestion of Parke Sawyer, and Atty. Lewis first tried it last year. The idea is that in early spring there are few bees out in the cold and the first blossoms of the tomato bloom fruitlessly. The artificial pollination replaces the work of the bees and tomatoes form much earlier than usual. Last year Atty. Lewis wasn't sure of the result of his experiment. This year he applied the chemical dust very early in the season, is satisfied that its use will provide him with some of the earliest ripe tomatoes grown in any local garden.

INTEPRETER—We see by the papers that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Attlee of Great Britain are telling the world that Russia should stop irritating the United States.

From this corner it would appear there could be nothing more irritating than to have the abovenamed gentlemen interpreting American sentiment and forecasting American policy. It is particularly irritating at a time when America is seeking a better understanding with Russia.

WITH THE MOVIES — Some rather flippant comments were presented the other day concerning the movies, and in particular one Johnny Johnson who, with Esther Williams, will come to Mackinac Island this summer in the filming of an MGM technicolor effort. Previously it had been announced that it was Van Johnson, not Johnny (who sings), who would have the pleasant job of supporting Miss Williams in the cast.

Through Atty. John (Jack) Erickson of Escanaba we learn that a former local boy, Robert (Bob) Curtis, who is cost accountant for MGM, may make the trip to Mackinac Island this summer and come to Escanaba to renew his friendships here. This information came to Atty. Erickson in a recent letter from Bob. The two last met at Culver City, where Bob lives, when Jack was in the Navy during the war.

Bob's letter also contained the information that the name of the movie with a Mackinac Island locale will be "Gentleman's Gentleman". At least that is the title at this writing. Only last week it was called "This Time for Keeps", but movie titles change often in the making.

The son of Omer Curtis, Bob graduated from Escanaba High school about 1930, left Escanaba a few years later. He was next heard from in Mexico, where he was assistant manager of a gold mine, and later went to Los Angeles, which has also become noted as a gold mine. Last winter around the holidays he spent about three months in Mexico again during the making of a movie. His father, and his brother Omer Jr., are in business in Minneapolis.

OVER THE LINE—Friends of Escanaba Police Chief Michael Ettenhofer, who know the chief enjoys an amusing situation, laughed with him the other day when just such a situation developed. Stopping at a local cafe for a cup of coffee, the chief heard a considerable commotion outside on the street, and a moment later city workmen who were painting parking lines on the pavement came in to ask the owner of a car parked at the curb to move it so they could paint the lines. The car, they said, was over the parking line. They were hesitant but firm. It was the chief's car.

THE SCANDINAVIANS—Peter Jensen of the Hansen & Jensen company of Escanaba takes pride in the 1946 list of Escanaba High school honor students for a very Scandinavian reason—five or the 16 honor students have Scandinavian names. Mr. Jensen, former Delta county representative in the state legislature, might also tell you that of the five, two are Petersons.

This fine representation of children of parents of Scandinavian extraction was directed to Mr. Jensen's attention while he was issuing honor day luncheon invitation to students and parents for the Rotary Club, of which he is a member. "The people of the Scandinavian countries have the lowest percentage of illiteracy in the world," he pointed out.

ONE THOUSAND ACES — A grand slam in bridge may be hot stuff for some, but when a pinochle player holds one thousand aces it is worth writing about. For the game's score is 1,000 and the game is won with one hand.

Mrs. Charles Ehnerd, 405 South 11th street, playing pinochle recently with Mrs. John Moe at the Ehnerd home, held such a hand. And with the first hand in the new game, Mrs. Ehnerd held 300 pinochle.

G. I.—VETERANS SERVICE

Q. My husband is 4-D in the Army. Could you tell me what that signifies?

A. The classification 4-D signifies that your husband is disqualified for an overseas assignment due to the fact that his physical condition does not meet the minimum requirements.

Q. I am receiving $11.50 a month for 10 per cent disability. Since I have a wife and three children, I am uncertain whether this is the right amount?

A. Pension payments are based on the degree of disability rather than the number of persons dependent upon the veteran.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Q. What is the cause of tides?

A. The attraction of the sun and moon upon the waters of the ocean. The moon being nearest to the earth, her attraction is six times greater than that of the sun. This attraction of the moon raises the waters of the ocean as they come under her influence by the motion of the earth on its axis.

Q. What is the temperature of dry ice?

A. At atmospheric pressure the sublimation temperature of solid carbon dioxide (dry ice) is -109.2 degrees F.

Q. Is milk included in the average diet of practically everyone in the United States? I read that a great many people do not use it at all.

A. Figures recently issued show that 44.4 percent of men drink no milk; 49.4 percent of women drink no milk; 9.5 percent of children from six to twelve years old drink no milk; 13.3 percent of children thriteen to eighteen years old drink no milk.

Q. What is the actual meaning of the name Benedict?

A. "Blessed" from the Latin.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington.—A man stood in front of an apartment house on Connecticut Avenue trying to hail a taxi. Scores of taxis sped down the avnue, all too busy or too full to stop.

The man stood, patient, dignified, apparently accustomed to this delay. His stately mien did not jibe with the job of standing on a street corner and signaling for a taxi, but he persisted.

Pearson

Several swank limousines drove up to the apartment house to drop or pick up passengers, but the dignified gentleman on the curb patiently continued to wait for more plebeian transportation.

He was Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader of the senate. And his difficult efforts to hail a taxi are perhaps symbolic of other things in Barkley's current career.

The Senator has no car of his own. McKellar of Tennessee, the senate's presiding officer, has taken over the vice-presidential car. Leslie Biffle, Secretary of the Senate, has two cars though he uses them not for himself but for senatorial errands. Every cabinet member and many subcabinet members have government cars and chauffeurs. But the majority leader of the senate walks or tries to hail a taxi.

Unlike one or two of his colleagues, Barkley has not built up a lush law firm. He has no independent income. Unlike one or two of his colleagues, also, he has not used his inside knowledge to speculate on the commodities market.

Mrs. Barkley has been ill for many months, and sometimes the senator does not know from one day to the next whether she will pull through the week. He has been filling lecture engagements to pay the nurse and doctors' bills.

—BARKLEY GROWS—

Yet up on Capitol Hill, one would never guess from the way Barkley patiently pushes forward the President's program that tragic problems worry him at home. Never losing his sense of humor, he strives to pacify tempers, marshal the scattered tangents of the Democratic party and pull the administration's program out of Impossible party.

Those who watched Barkley in the old days under Roosevelt agree that he has grown in stature. Abundant leadership came from the White House then—sometimes, the senate felt, too much leadership. Barkley in those days was led, rather than the leader.

Today, with less leadership in the White House, the senator from Kentucky has stepped forward to pick up a large share of the burden of the dead chieftain with whom he sometimes so vigorously differed.

There was a day when Alben Barkley hoped he might be appointed to the Supreme Court. As far as he is concerned, that day is past. Barkley went down the line for the supreme court appointment of his friend, Jimmy Byrnes, some years ago, and since then has put aside all thought that the judicial lightning might strike in his direction. He is as philosophical about this as he is about waiting for a taxi.

However, it might well be that this is the time when a man with the pacifying experience of Barkley is needed to heal the wounds of the highest court.

—U. S. - ARGENTINE ARMY ALLIANCE—

Inside details regarding the visit of Lt. Gen. Von Der Becke, the Argentine chief of staff, have now leaked out. The complete story shows that the U. S. Army is now barging into our Latin-American policy.

Real fact is that the Argentine general's visit was arranged by General Eisenhower, despite the opposition of assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden, who bucked every inch of the way. Secretary Byrnes, however, finally gave the mission his O. K.

Eisenhower believes that the Latin American armies of the western hemisphere should have the same type of equipment as the United States so they can cooperate in time of war with interchangeable weapons and ammunition. This was behind his idea of a conference with the Argentine chief of staff.

However, in order to avoid too much conflict with the State Department, General Von Der Becke went to the unusual length of resigning as chief of staff, so he could come to the United States on a "private" mission allegedly to get medical treatment at John Hopkins. If he had come as chief of staff, it would have been necessary to give him an official reception, brass bands, red carpet, and a lot of trimmings which would have been resented by the American public.

Note—The State Department is still smarting over the fast one put over by the War Department and some diplomats are pointing to the infiltration of generals and admirals into U. S. diplomacy. Truman has appointed Gen. George Marshall ambassador to China; Gen. Bettle Smith ambassador to Russia; Gen. John Hilldring assistant secretary of state, and Admiral Alan Kirk ambassador to Belgium. Now, with the State Department overruled on Latin American policy, diplomats are wondering whom they should talk to in the future — Secretary Byrnes or General Eisenhower.

A German butter-making machine said to produce 1500 pounds an hour has been brought to the U. S. for testing. All we want to know is when and where?

BOY BANDITS CAUGHT AGAIN

Pair Awaits Hearing In Detention Home Here

Escanaba's boy bandits, the two twelve-year-old youngsters who observed Memorial Day by robbing five downtown stores of more than $600 in cash and a small quantity of miscellaneous merchandise, are finally lodged in the detention home at the county infirmary after another escapade Thursday in which they stole a couple of rings from the Feldstein store, several similar articles from Neisner's and a golf ball from the Varsity Shop.

According to police there was evidence that the pair planned an entry into the Boston Sweet Shop and the Villemure bicycle shop, too.

The boys had been turned over to the custody of the probate court after last week's burglaries and apparently had avoided each other until Thursday when they met at school as classes ended for the year.

They will remain in the detention home until brought before Probate Judge William J. Miller for a hearing.

Police Chief Michael Ettenhofer said that he felt obliged to recommend that the boys be sent to the state reformatory.

Railroads Build New Luxury Trains, And Offer Safety At High Speeds

By A. F. MAHAN

Washington — Tomorrow's trains are destined to be much like swank resort hotels flashing across country. To compete with the airplane, railways will woo the traveling public with "three features — spaciousness, comfort and safety," says Robert S. Henry, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads.

So, you can expect to see two-story streamlined coaches with transparent tops for sightseeing; speedups to clip 12 to 18 hours off transcontinental schedules, and eventually, perhaps, a 200-mile-an-hour engine.

There'll be cocktail lounges with dance floors, movie theaters, cafeterias and cars full of individual rooms with individual radios and telephones.

Record Order Is In

Already 2,200 passenger and sleeping cars, costing an estimated $176,000,000 have been ordered for delivery in the next 12 months —more than were built in 10 years before the war. There are 40,000 modern freight cars on order, and the average cost is $4,000.

New roomette cars include 106 improvements over the standard sleepers of today. J. J. Pelley, president of the association, says "coaches better than the best we knew before the war will become common."

The E. G. Budd Manufacturing Co. is building 32 single rooms into its streamlined stainless-steel "Budgette" car; a "Cabin" car with 22 rooms, and double bedroom cars with shower baths.

Budd already has a "Vista Dome" car, a doubledecker with glassed-in top, operating on the Burlington Lines' Zephyr routes.

Triple Decker Coming

To match the "Vista Dome," the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. has developed a three-deck commuter coach with two game rooms on the center level, in addition to grill room and cafeteria cars.

Both Pullman and the American Car and Foundry Co. are building roomette and master bedroom cars. Pullman has developed the car including a motion picture theatre and a cocktail lounge for dancing.

Also coming up from major manufacturers is a 'junior club car," which features a playground slide, blackboard, marionette show and minature piano.

Chrome fixtures and long spacious windows are being featured in the American Car and Foundry Company's new streamlined day coaches, which will have fluorescent lighting.

Rebuilding Regular Coaches

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, awaiting new trains from manufacturers, is rebuilding conventional coaches from the underframe up, spending $38,000 each.

Hardly an American railroad will not add new trains in the near future and speed up schedules.

Already many crack trains are back on fast pre-war schedules. Regional services are being speeded up one to six hours.

One of the nation's four railroad bottlenecks, Chicago, has been cracked—it is no lolonger necessary to change trains east or west. Railroading circles look for lines to join in establishing one-station facilities in cities now served by as many as three or four.

Chesapeake and Ohio, whose national advertising campaign resulted in six lines establishing no-change, east-west service through Chicago, now is clamoring to break the St. Louis bottleneck, where through passengers now must change trains. No one has mentioned Memphis.

New Orleans' Problem

New Orleans presents a major problem. The railways can't go underground there, and overpass would entail prohibitive payments to property owners and the railways lack authority to cross Canal street.

Henry says, "The real future in passenger traffic is not in speeding up railways, but in their making most of spaciousness, comfort and safety." But, he agrees that speedups will aid in meeting airway competition.

Illinois and Northwestern universities working with the AAR have developed a rail one-fourth as likely to break and twice as durable as that of 15 years ago. Welding permits a continuous rail. One is more than two miles long.

Asphalt and cement mixtures now are pumped into roadbed "soft spots." Rail weights have been increased 20 per cent.

More Frequent Runs

Centralized traffic control has come a long way, via the radio, telephone and automatic signal board. Many trains flash their positions to dispatchers, and their movement is controlled as far as 100 miles away.

As new equipment becomes available, many trains now operating on a twice-weekly or weekly schedule, will run daily—the Santa Fe's Super Chief and El Capitain, the Burlington's Zephyrs, for instance.

The Missouri Pacific's new streamliner from St. Louis to Mexico City is slated to make the run in 45½ hours, 18 less than now. A number of trains operating between Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans and California and the Pacific northwest are to clip 12 hours off their current 60-hour schedules.

The Norfolk and Western is changing its Cincinnati-Norfolk run from 22 to 17 hours and doing away with sleeper requirements.

Other Time Cuts

The Broadway and Century limiteds from New York to Chicago are back on 16-hour schedules. The Chicago-to-San Francisco and Los Angeles times has been reduced from 43 to 40 hours, and the time between Chicago and Seattle is to be shaved 15 hours as soon as new equipment is available.

Prices and curves and bridges are among the things that keep most trains moving at less than 80 miles an hour, although modern engines are designed for 120.

As a general-purpose power unit, the old reciprocating steam job which made its bow in 1830 is here to stay a good while longer, say engineers, calculating cost, maintenance, weight and other factors.

The Power Quotient

Diesels and electrics will be used more and more, at least until something cheaper, more powerful and speedier is found.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works and the Pennsylvania Railroad have built a 6,500-horsepower steam turbine engine which has run more than 35,000 miles without apparent gear wear. Both Allis-Chalmers and General Electric Co. have completed designs for gas-turbine locomotives using electric drives.

The nation's railroads have ordered 465 new locomotives of all types since V-E day.

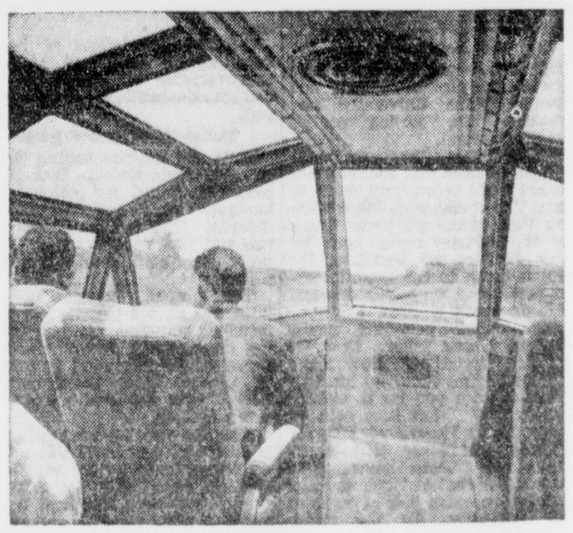
In test runs a conventional locomotive on the Pennsylvania's Fort Wayne division pulled a 16-car train at an average speed of 102 miles an hour, the same as attained in a Union Pacific test run with a similar train.

Speed to Washington

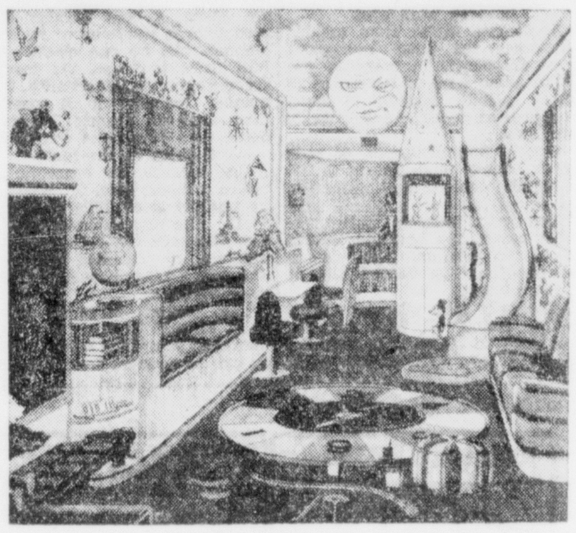
Pennsylvania electrics run the 225 miles between New York and Washington in 225 minutes, with enought stops to require approximately 100 miles per hour between them.

The Burlington's Zephyrs average 84 miles an hour over portions of their runs and the Chicago and Northwestern gets 85.4 miles per hour out of one of its trains. Practically all railroads prohibit speeds in excess of 100 miles per hour as "a safety precaution.'

When the day comes that roadbeds will hold them, bridges will support them, and the curves have been straightened, railroading men vow "we'll have a 200-miles-an-hour engine.'



PANORAMA from the "Vista Dome" of the upper deck on a new glass top luxury car, which is already in operation on the Burlington Zephyrs through scenic stretches of the West.



WONDERLAND on wheels is the "Junior Club Car" for children designed by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. A slide reached through a cave, miniature piano, marionettes and games will be supervised by a stewardess.

Bill Cary Will Be Isle Royale Ranger During The Summer

Bill Carey, son of Mrs. George Kieser, Ford River Road, and Jack Chappel, Flint, his roommate at Michigan Tech in Houghton, have been engaged by the National Park Service to serve as rangers on Isle Royale during the summer months.

The two young men took the examination conducted by the National Park Service and were selected among a sizable number of applicants.

They will alternate in taking charge of a ranger station, four and a half miles inland on the wilderness island. The Lake Superior park is expected to have a heavy tourist traffic this season.

Cary was active in Boy Scout work while attending the Escanaba public schools. He enrolled at the Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton following his discharge from the armed forces.

Want A Job? City Needs Dogcatchers

Want a job?

It's not permanent and it won't make you very popular but it will keep you busy at least for a couple of weeks.

The dog nuisance is getting no better despite repeated police warnings that a city ordinance requires owners to keep their pets on a leash or otherwise restrained during the summer months; and so the police need a couple of dog catchers.

Interested applicants can get all of the details from Police Chief Michael Ettenhofer.

POTATO DRIED WHILE FROZEN

Experiment Station In Alaska Develops New Process

College, Alaska—California may have sun-dried raisins and prunes; Alaska offers something new—and not under the sun, either, for it is done best in the long, frigid dark of the subarctic winter nights. It is a process for cold-drying potatoes, worked out by Dr. Basil M. Benain, agronomist at the Alaska Agricultural Experiment Station here.

Dr. Bensin's process consists in slicing raw potatoes very thin — from one-sixteenth to one-eighth inch—spreading the slices on a wire-netting frame, and setting them outdoors in the cold air for from 50 to 60 hours. They freeze immediately, but lose water even while they are frozen. It is not evaporation, strictly speaking; such loss of water from the frozen state is technically known as sublimation.

In Dr. Bensin's experiments potato slices lost more than 60c of their water content. Their vitamin content remained unchanged, he states.

The potato slices darken on exposure to the air, as all potatoes do. This is a result of a simple enzyme reaction, and does not affect their food value. The original white color can be restored by bleaching with sulfur dioxide, a standard method long in use for bleaching dried fruits and vegetables.

Dr. Bensin believes his process can be applied also to other Alaska-grown vegetables, like carrots, beets and parsnips. The frost-dried products, compact and lightweight, should be useful additions to the food supplies of prospectors, miners, trappers and other men who have to watch the weight of their field rations.

A frozen-dehydration process has been used in the preparation of dried blood plasma and serums and in the crystallization of penicillin. A similar process has also been patented for the preparation of dehydrated foods without heating them, and is expected to be in commercial production within a few months. But these processes require elaborate and expensive refrigeration machinery, and often vacuum pumps as well. All Dr. Bensin needs is a sharp knife, some wire netting and wood—and the Alaska winter.

16,000 ATTEND ROTARY CONFAB

Lindsay Confirmed As President - Elect Of District

Atlantic City, N. J.—The 37th annual convention of Rotary International, which was attended by 16,000 Rotarians and members of their families from 50 different countries, came to a close here Thursday evening.

OFFICE UNCHANGED

Atlantic City, N. J. (AP)—Rotary International has rejected by a 1,813 to 1,359 vote a resolution calling for transfer of international headquarters from Chicago to Denver.

Keynote of the five-day gathering of business and professional executives, representing 5,800 clubs in 72 countries, was the internationality of the Rotary organization. Emphasis was given throughout the convention to the opportunities which Rotarians have in all parts of the world to assist in the achievement of the goals of the United Nations, which are strikingly similar to one of the principal objectives of Rotary International—the advancement of international understanding, good will, and peace.

Special tribute was paid to representatives of Rotary Clubs in former Axis-occupied countries which have been readmitted to membership in Rotary International since the end of the war. Included are Belgium, Burma, Czechoslavakia, France, Greece, Hong Kong, Luxembourg, Norway, the Marianas, the Netherlands, the Philippines and the Straits Settlement.

Harold P. Lindsay of Escanaba, president-elect of the 143rd district, which includes Northern Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, attended the convention and was confirmed as district president succeeding Francis E. Taylor of Merrill, Wis.

Lindsay will assume his duties July 1, and as an officer of Rotary International he will visit the 48 clubs which comprise the 143rd district. He will assist the officers of these clubs on matters pertaining to Rotary activities and administration.

Next year's convention, as announced by Richard C. Hedke of Detroit, Rotary's newly-elected president, will be held in San Francisco, California.

Menominee County Men To Participate In Institute Here

Two community leaders of Menominee county will take part in the Local Planning Institute scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, June 10 and 11, at Escanaba. Delegates have been invited from the fifteen counties of the Upper Peninsula and will come together to obtain information on planning activities being undertaken throughout the state and to discuss various problems of county and community planning. Jointly sponsored by the Michigan Planning Commission and the Escanaba City Council and Chamber of Commerce, this is the eighth in a serious of local planning institutes arranged at various places in the state by the Michigan Planning Commission.

Herbert W. Corey, Stephenson Village president and chairman of the Menominee County Planning Committee, will serve on the staff for the two individual consultation periods during the institute. Along with State Treasurer D. Hale Brake, Herbert A. Berg of Michigan State College, and Gale H. Gibson of the Michigan Planning Commission, he will be available for questions and consultation with individual delegates.

E. J. Pearce, engineer-superintendent of the Menominee County Road Commission will take part in the highway planning consultation along with J. D. Cruise, assistant director planning and traffic division, State Highway Dept.

Round table discussions will be held at the institute on the subjects of county-rural and city-village planning. Two luncheon meetings and one dinner meeting are scheduled. Speakers include Dr. Grover C. Dillman, president, Michigan College of Mining and Technology.

Tons Of Food Wasted By Army, Report Says

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Staff Correspondent

New York (NEA)—Hundreds of thousands of tons of food have been wasted by the U. S. Army while starvation has stalked across Europe.

That is the appalling story behind the report to Secretary of War Patterson by a nine-man civilian committee which investigated Army food handling processes in 42 posts throughout the United States.

Information has just been obtained by NEA Service which documents and illustrates, point by point, the charges of waste, inefficiency and carelessness made by the committee in its report.

Excerpts from the report were released by Patterson April 29. The report was based on 12,076 miles of travel by a committee which inspected 250 messes, commissaries, warehouses and meat cutting plants in the 42 posts and depots.

The committee, headed by John L. Hennessy, Chairman of the Board of the Hotels Statler, included four men who have received the War Department's highest award to civilians—the exceptional civil service citation. Vallee O. Appel, Chicago, head of the largest cold storage plant in the country, and Hobart A. Ross, Des Moines, Ia., who operates 24 retail and wholesale grocery outlets, are typical of the experience which went into the survey.

Here is a breakdown of the major topics covered by the committee's report giving first the comment from the full text report and then the illustrative examples obtained by NEA from its sources:

Storage

Report: "Serious losses, principally in perishable supplies, are caused by improper storage practices. Crates of spoiled beets, peaches, etc., were found at one post. Contamination of butter and eggs, stored with fish and onions, mixed storage of dairy products with smoked meats, fruits and vegetables and failure to maintain correct cold storage temperatures were commonly noted."

Case: At an Army hospital 200 miles from Denver, says an NEA source, a young lieutenant was in charge of the meat cooling room. His qualification for the post was that in Brooklyn, N. Y., he had helped his father run a restaurant. A visitor asked the lieutenant the temperature of the room in which were hung long lines of carcasses. He shrugged and said he didn't know. His attention was called to an Army regulation that the temperature should not be over 13 degrees, Fahrenheit, in that room. He couldn't locate the thermometer. When others located the thermometer it was found to be broken. Another thermometer was brought in and showed the meat for hospital patients was being stored at 40 degrees F—27 degrees above the maximum set for keeping meat safely.

Perishable Food

Report: "Very few canned goods inspected by us show on the exterior of the case the date of packing, which is necessary if the oldest supplies are to be used ahead of the others. Several instances were noted where the milling date stamped on bags of flour was subsequent to the date on which the committee visited the posts. We found flour delivered to post warehouses which had no date of milling stamped on bags or tags."

Case: NEA's sources have seen flour in storage in September which was dated as having been milled the following month. Obviously this highly spoilable food could not be stored intelligently when the milling date was a fake. Visitors to post warehouses have been amazed at the vast quantities of canned milk. Canned milk will spoil and the cans swell if not turned upside down periodically. An officer asked how he managed to turn so large a stock said, "Oh, they'll take care of themselves." Sample cans, taken at random, were starting to swell indicating spoilage.

Report: Lack of proper control of requisition and distribution of post stocks is resulting in a serious loss of food."

Case: Today, while frantic appeals are being made to every patriotic citizen to save wheat for the famine-threatened areas of Europe and Asia, NEA learns from trustworthy sources that in some southern camps carloads of flour stood in railroad sidings, unused and getting maggoty. Why? Because the excess flour had been forced on the camps and stations by the Army depots, where inventory ends. In Brooklyn, N. Y., alone, there were enough unused dehydrated potatoes at a recent date to relieve a starving country.

Supervision

Report: "The supervision of mess operation at the present time is not competent. "We have observed that too often food service officers have multiple duties which so divide their time as to deny sufficient attention to proper food supervision."

Case: A GI at one camp told the supervisory officer there were mice in the storage room. The officer denied it. The soldier called his officer's attention to fresh offal in the storage room. The officer still denied there were mice in the room. The soldier then discovered mouse traps set in the corridor outside the room. Mice carry disease. The room was full of meat.

Personal

Report: "As to the inferiority of personnel in food preparation, it appears to this committee to be the result directly or indirectly of a failure of the War Department and too many commanding offcers to appreciate the vital importance of good and palatable food in a soldier's life."

Case: Approximately 400,000 men were trained by the Army for food work. Of these only about 100,000 were actually used in commissaries and messes.

The attitude of some of the personnel actually assigned to food preparation for the troops may be illustrated by this conversation between a visitor to a camp and a mess sergeant. The sergeant was making coffee with two pounds of coffee to every 20 gallons of water. Neither he nor his supervisor had read the army specifications for coffee, which are eight pounds of coffee to every 20 gallons of water.

"Don't the GI's complain about this coffee? the sergeant was asked.

He replied: "Oh, hell yes, but they're always complaining about something."

SCOUTS TO BE AT STATE FAIR

Hiawathaland Council Plans Exhibit, Messenger Service

The Hiawathaland Council of the Boy Scouts will prepare an interesting exhibit at the Upper Peninsula State Fair in Escanaba Aug. 27-Sept. 1 and will also provide messenger service at the fairgrounds. S. N. Bradford, of Escanaba, field executive of the Red Buck district, will be in charge of the Scout exhibit.

The Boy Scout display, which will be located on the main floor of the exhibition building near the Department of Conservation exhibit, will feature the three aspects of the Boy Scout program —Cubbing, Scouting and Senior Scouting. All five districts of the Hiawathaland Council will provide displays for the Boy Scout exhibit. The theme of the exhibit will feature dominant phases of Scoutcraft, including camping, first aid, etc.

Each Boy Scout district in the council, which embraces the Upper Peninsula, will provide Boy Scouts for the messenger service at the fairgrounds. At least 20 Scouts will be required each day.

This is the first time in the history of the Upper Peninsula State Fair that the Boy Scouts have been given an opportunity to present an exhibit.

"The Boy Scouts are doing a grand job in the Upper Peninsula," Harold P. Lindsay, fair manager, commented, "and we want to give them proper recognition at the U. P. State Fair."

Scientists Study How To Make Plastics Get Tough

By JAMES E. HAGUE
AP Newsfeature

Baltimore — A friendly contest between the plastics industry and Johns Hopkins University may determine the destiny of this wonder material.

The industry tries to make laminated plastics that chemical engineers can't break, pull apart or burn. The chemists at Johns Hopkins keep doing all those things and the industry comes back for more, because the results of the tests indicate to the manufacturers just what they can do—and can't do—with plastics.

How much pounding can a piece of plastic take? How far can you stretch it? How many millions of times can you bend it? How hard can you hit it without breaking it? What does cold do to it? Heat? Humidity? Fungus?

Those questions, and many others, are being answered in what is believed at Hopkins to be an unpresedented link of industry and university. All the major American producers of laminated plastics send samples of basic materials to Hopkins for thorough, unbiased tests and for comparative reports.

Raising Standards

Laminates differ from molded plastics — the kind recognized most frequently in everyday use —but some form of laminated or sheet plastic appears in many things used today, from irons to airplanes.

Out of the thousands of tests come charts and graphs which show the fundamental properties of every piece of laminate produced by the industry. Each manufacturer knows how his product stands in relation. Just who is ahead of him or behind him he doesn't know.

The only man who does know —Dr. Ralph K. Witt, associate professor of chemical engineering at Hopkins—forgets as soon as he can.

On the foundation of basic knowledge is built two things—improvements by manufacturers and development of new products.

Bullet-Proof Know How

Thus, the Hopkins testing "lab" reported basic findings that glass cloth substituted for cotton in a laminate had far more impact resistance. The manufacturer put two and two together and bullet-proof glass cloth plastic was the result.

The project, headed by Dr. Witt, was started because the tremendous war-time need for plastics demanded a central clearing house where elemental questions of plastic values could be answered with the least waste motion and time.

The thirteen major producers of laminated plastics in this country set up and financed the Hopkins project, with Dr. Witt in charge and with chemical engineers, physical chemists and graduate students on his staff.

Each producer sends one sample of various plastic materials, ranging in price from a few cents to a dollar a pound. The samples are given a code number and each firm is informed of its own number, but no one else's. Dr. Witt tries to forget the master list to guarantee impartiality. The number assigned to a specific firm—General Electric, Westinghouse, etc.—is changed frequently.

Gaining on the Field

One concern, for example, received a report from Dr. Witt that its product stood 10th in a field of 13. The manufacturer studied the disappointing data, put the pressure on his own engineers. The next report showed that firm standing third.

The project takes up only a small amount of space but in a matter of seconds, a piece of plastic can be shunted from the artificially created heat of the noonday sun, to 30 degrees below zero, to 179 degrees above zero, to a drenching rainfall.

Whirring motors spin the cams which bend plastic back and forth —perhaps 20,000,000 times—until it breaks. Each bend is counted.

Plastic is compressed with 50,000 pounds pressure, pulled apart by 10,000 pounds. A 15,000 volt arc dances across the stuff until the insulating properties are burned out. That exact second is recorded.

Fungus grows on laminates in hundreds of glass jars. The result will tell the manufacturer what to expect from plastic in the fetid jungles. Plastic is baked for hours and hours. There are many plastic parts in an airplane and the heat resistant properties must be known before a plane can be parked on a dazzling concrete apron under the tropic sun with predictable results.

A hardness test proved that a plastic washboard could be treated to be as impervious to soap and cleansing materials as porcelain. The difference was a dish dropped on porcelain usually broke. It didn't on the softer plastic.

They showed in routine tests that another type was a poorer heat conductor than asbestos. The manufacturer took that tip and made plastic linings for refrigerators.

Dr. Witt's office is chockablock with laminate examples. He is certain the future of plastics is almost unlimited.

"But that future must be charted," he says, "and we are helping make those charts."

B&PW Holds Last Meeting Of Year

Members of the Business and Professional Women's Club held their final meeting of the club year at the Dells this week. Mrs. Caroline Nystrom, president, reported on the convention of the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, which was held recently in Traverse City. Highlight of the convention was the talk by Sally Butler, representative of the National Federation, who stressed the need for concerted action by the women of the world in helping to solve the problems facing this and other nations today. Women's greatest weapon in attaining world peace and other objectives is the vote, "if we use it," she declared.

"We have in this country the making of a new government, a government for the world, a government that must have the cooperation and help of every individual, the help of everybody in America," she said. "Make every effort to make your community the best community in the world, not for what it can do for you, but what it can do for the people of the nation and for the world."

The following newly elected officers of the club were installed at a candle-light ceremony by Julia Parsons, installing officer: Caroline Nystrom, president; Hazel Wickert, vice-president; Eva Michaud, corresponding secretary; Alice Potter, recording secretary, and Ingrid Tervonen, treasurer.

Join Lions Cleanup Contest Mellon Urges

Munising—Persons wishing to enter the Lions club spring cleanup, paint-up campaign offering prizes totaling merchandize worth $100 may still do so, chairman A. A. Mellon said yesterday.

Dr. Mellon reports that entries are coming in slow and there is still a chance for many people about town who are doing any type of clean up which tends to beautify exteriors of dwellings, to get in the contest.

The length of the contest has been extended another month, due to the cold, wet weather in May. The contest will now run May, June and July.

Entry blanks may be obtained at all paint stores. Contestants are urged to fill out and mail entry blanks at once. All types of exterior cleaning or improvement such as yard improvement, (having a victory garden, flower garden or rock garden, lawn or fence improvement), make homes eligible to be entered in the contest.

Four local painters are each doing an exhibit panel and the four panels will be made into a pyramid and placed on display at the Peoples State Bank corner. Painters will be Ralph King, Frank Stebbins, Ed Peterson and son and Bill Bauman.

Posters are placed throughout the town at various business places advertising the campaign.

Dr. Mellon takes color movies before a project is started and after it is finished.

PERIL TO COAL SEEN IN DIESEL

Railroads Are Shifting Rapidly To New Motive Power

Chicago — A Munich inventor may have set the stage for today's coal-mine crisis. Rudolph Diesel gave to the world the internal combustion engine bearing his name, an efficient power unit using cheap oil as fuel instead of expensive gasoline. The diesel engine has now been developed to the point where it looms as a potential if not presently threatening rival of coal as a source of cheap electricity.

Solution for Railroads

On one side is the question as to whether the hard-working miners get enough pay and whether working conditions are proper.

On the other side is the question as to whether the market for coal, entirely aside from the size of profits and the social attitudes of the operators, will continue to be such as to warrant pay increases.

At any rate diesel power has for some time been increasingly in use in place of coal in industry, particularly by railroads and small municipal light plants.

Some railroad executives here see the roads turning exclusively to diesel power eventually. Ten years ago there were 150 diesel-elcetric units in use on the nation's railroads. Today there are more than 4,300 and orders for new units are literally swamping manufacturers, chief of which is the Electro-Motive Corporation, a General Motors subsidiary here.

These diesel power units have a high initial cost, compared with a steam locomotive, but the cost of operation is but a fraction. This is not only because of lower fuel costs per unit of power produced, but because the engines may be operated 90 per cent and more of the time whereas a steam engine is in service less than half of the time, the rest being spent in repairing, overhauling, and servicing.

It was no coincidence that the western roads were the first to adopt the diesel engine in both passenger and freight service. This area is the farthest from and least indebted to the coal-producing region. Eastern roads have been slow to use diesel power, because much of their freight business comes from the coal producers. The economy of the diesel engine, plus the current coal trouble, may bring a change in this respect, however.

Rail pasenger business, it is pointed out by H. L. Hamilton, Electro - Motive President, increased 80 per cent during the eight years before the war, a trend coincident with the increased use of diesel power, which is usually the distinctive feature of the modern streamlined train.

The increased efficiency of diesel over steam is not in the same ratio in the case of stationary power plants, as with railroad locomotives, but improvements in diesel engines over the past half century have brought them also into wider use, especially in small municipal light plants.

In 1919, reports the Diesel Engine Manufacturing Association here, a total of only 38,000,000 kilowatt-hours was generated by diesel power. In 1943 the total was 1,175,000,000 kilowatt-hours.

In 1935 the horsepower generated by such installations totaled 400,000. In 1943 the total horsepower had risen to 850,000. The war brought a lull, because of the need of both engines and fuel for military purposes, but the upward trend has begun again.

It was stimulated naturally during the short period of the recent brownout due to the coal mine strike. In Chicago many large private power users found auxiliary diesel plants life savers. Some expanded these facilities, and indicate a wider use of such sources in the future. Even the large power producers installed new diesel units, which probably will now continue to operate.

The net effect is to limit the market for coal, unless the coal itself can be pulverized and liquified so as to provide suitable diesel fuel.

Scouts Plan Canvass Of City; Municipal Trucks Aid

A paper salvage drive is to be conducted in Gladstone today by members of the four Boy Scout troops in the city.

Municipal trucks will assist in the drive.

Every street in the city is to be canvassed.

Householders may bundle the paper or put it in containers and place either at the curb or on porch.

Regardless of whether or not there is paper out each house will be contacted by an advance group of Scouts as the trucks approach. Persons having paper with which they wish assistance in carrying from basement or attic may so advise the Scouts who stop.

Householders are being appealed to by those in charge of the drive to get out all idle magazines, newspapers or scrap paper and give to the Scouts at this time.

Scouts participating in the drive will earn money to aid them in paying for their annual camping trip.

The third finger of the left hand was chosen as the ring finger because the ancients used to believe that a vein ran from it directly to the heart.

Tips for Farmers

Potato farmers who have experienced difficulty in getting sufficient fertilizer for their potatoes should keep in mind that spray materials will also be scarce. Farmers who have not ordered their spray materials should get busy now and place their order. The latest reports indicate that copper sulphate will not be too plentiful. DDT recommended for controlling insects on potatoes will also be scarce. In order for dealers to get a better picture of the amount of spray materials needed, every farmer should place his order now.

Farmers can quickly figure the amount of materials needed. The recommended formula for Bordeaux this year is 8-4-100, meaning 2 pounds of copper sulphate, 4 pounds of lime and 100 gallons of water. To this mixture 1½ pounds of 50 per cent DDT is added to control all insects. If 25 per cent DDT is used, 3 pounds per 100 gallons is needed. If farmers are not using DDT and plan to use calcium arsenate as a poison, they should use the old formula for Bordeaux 8-12-100 which has 12 pounds of lime instead of four pounds as in the case of the formula used with DDT.

Some farmers will probably use other spray materials for blight control such as tri basic copper or cupricide. If they do, they should follow manufacturers directions as to the amount to use for 100 gallons of water. The amount of DDT to use will be the same—1½ pounds 50 per cent or 3 pounds of 25 per cent per 100 gallons of solution.

Hasbeens Trim Ramblers 8 to 6 Thursday Night

Ekdahl's Hasbeens won a hotly contested softball game over the Riverside Ramblers at the court house diamond Thursday evening, the score being 8 to 6.

Herb Laurion pitched for the Hasbeens for the first six innings and was relieved by Tony Popish. Bob Oberg twirled for the Ramblers for a similar period and was succeeded by B. Anderson.

The two teams will play a doubleheader at the high school stadium next Sunday afternoon, where a new softball diamond has been provided north of the football field.

Maurice Moon And Mary Louise Long United In Marriage

At a lovely June wedding which was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Moon, M-94, on Thursday, June 6, at 4 p. m., their son, Maurice, was united in marriage to Mary Louise Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Long, of Baldwin Park, Calif. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Meldon E. Crawford of the First Methodist church. The bridegroom's father sang "Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly", accompanied by Mrs. Crawford.

Attending the young couple were Miss Jean Winkel and William Wieland Jr.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white street length gown with blue accessories and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed flowers. Miss Winkel wore an aqua dress with white accessories and carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride. The bride carried a lace handkerchief of Mr. Moon's great grandmother Chapin. The mothers each wore corsages of lillies of the valley.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to 23 guests. The home was profusely decorated with lilacs and narcissus. Centered on a lace covered table was a large three tiered wedding cake.

The bride and groom left later on a wedding trip to lower Michigan and will return Monday to make their home for the present with Mr. Moon's parents at Grand View Farm.

The bride was accompanied from California by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Long, who returned to their home Thursday evening. Mrs. Belle Anderson of Lake Orion was also a guest at the wedding.

CLASS OF '46 BIDS FAREWELL

Class Day Exercises Were Held Friday Afternoon

Timely, and with becoming humility, were the words of Nancy Cookson, valedictorian, and Ann Peterson, salutatorian, in behalf of themselves and the members of their class at Class Day exercises at the high school auditorium Friday afternoon.

Miss Cookson, in the course of her talk, said: "Our four years of high school life seem but as a week, started with the feeling that it would never end and ending with the feeling that it had just begun. Now, all too soon, we are bidding farewell to these familiar halls. . . If and when we succeed, credit and thanks can be given to our schools, our churches and our homes. These institutions have given us our beginning and 'the beginning is half the thing'."

Miss Peterson's talk was, in part: "Thus it is that with serious minds we welcome this opportunity to take our place among those who have guided us on our way. . . We have no illusions about the future. We welcome the many problems that will confront us."

Miss Peterson's talk was a plea for lasting peace. In conclusion she said, "And years from now, when we sit as parents at a similar occasion, may we be joyful to know that our children shall go forth into a world of peace."

Commencement exercises, when a class of seventy-six will receive diplomas, will be held at the high school auditorium on next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

FEATHER TITLE CINCHED BY PEP

Wee Willie Kayos Sal Bartolo In 12 Rounds With Bolo Punch

BY SID FEDER

New York, June 7 (AP) — Wee Willie Pep went to work down the stretch of a scheduled 15-round fight tonight to catch up with Sal Bartolo, knock him out in 12 rounds and win undisputed possession of the world featherweight championship in Madison Square Garden. Pep scaled 126; Bartolo 125 1-4.

Taking command after letting Boston Sal set off all his firecrackers through the first seven sessions, Willie the Wisp from Hartford, Conn., caught up with the Boston battler in the ninth and went on from there to flatten Bartolo at 2 minutes, 41 seconds of the 12th.

Thus wiping out one of the dual championships on the books in the battling between the New York Boxing Commission and the National Boxing Association, the determined little fighting man from Connecticut put one 126-pound king on the throne where two have been ruling the roost since Henry Armstrong's heyday back in 1938.

Up to the time he threw the short right hand "bolo" punch that put Sal to sleep for the full "ten", Wee Willie held a slight edge of 7 to 4 in rounds on the Associated Press score card for the 11 completed heats largely because he was waiting until Sal got rid of all his fireworks in the early going.

The Sports Parade

By Ken Gunderman

Perhaps the screwiest aspect of the Baseball Guild's demands in organized baseball is its fight for abolition of the reserve club which binds a player to a club even beyond the period covered by his contract and its conflicting demand for a 50 per cent cut to a player in his purchase price when sold to another club. The second demand won't mean a thing if the reserve clause is eliminated from baseball contracts. Ball clubs have paid as much as $250,000 for a single player (Joe Cronin) simply because of the protection provided in the player's reserve clause.

* * *

If the reserve clause were eliminated, the sale price of ball players would drop to zero. As a matter of honest truth, organized baseball itself would almost certainly disintegrate without the protection provided for is the reserve clause. Conceding that there are many instances in which ball players logically are entitled to financial gain when they are sold to other clubs for profit, the situation is not one that lends itself readily to an arbitrary rule. Frequently players are sold at a sharp loss to the clubs owning their contracts.

* * *

There is no equitable way to fairly determine a player's cash value. Many players are now traded in the major and minor leagues without any cash considerations and no effort is made to appraise their value in money. It would be silly to force two ball clubs participating is such a trade to appraise the cash worth of the players involved and to pay half of that value to the players. The effect of such a rule would be to stymie baseball trades and that would work against the best interests of the game.

* * *

In general a player's value as a ball player is reflected in his individual contract with the club. The salaries now paid to the players show rather conclusively that the clubs, on the whole, are not pinching pennies. There are some exceptions to this rule, naturally, but the great majority of the players are receivisg salaries in line with their talents and ability. Baseball players are individualists and there is no room in the game for "featherbedding."

* * *

The present baseball setup isn't perfect. Some changes that would more adequately benefit the players are undoubtedly in order. This is particularly true in the provisions for sale and trade of players. It does seem that players should be given somewhat more consideration than the present rules provide when they are about to be shifted to another club. Too frequently the player's first knowledge of his transfer comes when he reads about it in the newspapers. This is hardly the American way of doing business.

Yanks Load Bases In 11th, Keller Gives Winning Touch

New York, June 7. (AP)—Charley Keller hammered his eleventh home run of the year today, but it was his bases loaded bunt in the eleventh inning that enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the Cleveland Indians, 6-5.

Keller, whose seventh inning circuit blast tied the count at 5-5, batted in four runs as the Yanks extended their winning streak to five straight and reduced Boston's first place margin to six games. The Red Sox were idle.

Immortal Ty Cobb In Detroit Hospital

Detroit, June 7. (AP)—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, baseball's immortal "Georgia Peach," was resting more comfortably this afternoon in a Detroit hospital to which he was taken this morning with what his physician called an attack of acute tracheal bronchitis.

Dr. Burt R. Shurly, old friend of the 59-year-old former Detroit Tiger star who led American league hitters 12 different seasons, said that Cobb was "a little better" late today and that his cough was improving.

"Ty is in remarkably good physical condition," Dr. Shurly said, "and we ought to break up this trouble very quickly—probably in two or three days."

Cobb, whose home is in Atherton, Calif., is a Detroit visitor in connection with the golden jubilee of the automotive industry.

The triumph extended Chicago's winning streak to five straight and snapped a three-in-a-row win skein of the Dodgers.

There was no resumption of the fisticuffs which highlighted the Cub's recent visit to Brooklyn.

Pittsburgh Guild Walkout Averted And Game Goes On

Pittsburgh, June 7 (AP) — The threatened strike by the Pittsburgh Pirates for recognition of the American Baseball Guild was averted tonight less than an hour before the players were scheduled to take the field against the New York Giants.

The terse announcement, "No strike," was made by Bob Rice, field director of the Pirates and head of their farm system, who had been called into a closed meeting by the players.

Rice asserted he did not go in as a representative of the management "but just because they asked for me," he added:

"They said 'no strike,' that's all —just 'no strike.'

"There was no spokesman. They just all sort of said it."

Robert Murphy, labor relations director of the guild who had claimed 95 percent of the Pirates were members, said he did not know whether the decision would be a fatal blow to the guild.

"I'll have to see the players," he said. "It will hurt a lot."

As the Pirates hurriedly dressed and trotted out on the playing field, Murphy stood in a runway near the dressing room. As one player passed him, Murphy called out:

"Good luck."

The player yelled back over his shoulder: "Thanks."

A veteran Pirate player, who requested anonymity said Rice made a 10-minute talk in the improvised meeting room and that it was conciliatory and probably had some effect on the balloting.

This player asserted that Rice tacitly promised some of the concessions for which the guildsmen were ready to strike but implored them not to "take this attitude and strike."

Some of the Pirates began arriving late in the afternoon for a meeting at the clubhouse and gathered into card-playing knots. Manager Frank Frisch appeared to say that he wanted everybody except the players out of the clubhouse.

Murphy was present at the time. He said he "stood around" briefly and that Frisch told him personally: "Murphy, will you please leave? This meeting is for players only."

Murphy complied, but told newsmen he would try to hold a later meeting himself.

CUBS PRACTICE AT 2 O'CLOCK

Play Trenary Sunday In Opener; Bears At Iron Mountain

A combination of commencement week activities and rain forced postponement of practice sessions scheduled the past few days by the Escanaba Cubs but Manager Al Ness announced yesterday that the team will practice this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the city diamond.

Ness had planned a brisk workout for last night but the rainfall forced a change in plans. Sunday the Cubs will make their debut in the Rainbow baseball league, meeting Trenary at the city diamond.

Bill Thorin is slated to pitch for the Cubs against Trenary with Don Scott catching. Jack Schils will be at first base, Lough at second, Tom Dufour at third, Mickey Kuchenberg at shortstop, Bob Dufour, left field; Jim Ross, centerfield, and Jack Finn, right field.

While the Cubs are playing Trenary here Sunday, the Escanaba Bears will meet the Iron Mountain Rangers at Iron Mountain. Jack Beck is slated for mound duty against the Rangers and Jim Fitzpatrick, the other half of the Bears' staff, will probably be assigned to first base. Jerome Deloria, the club's regular first sacker, is ill, and Anderson, who has been relieving Deloria, will be unavailable for Sunday. The only other first sacker in the Bears' roster, Bill Thorin, was given a conditional release this week to hurl for the Escanaba Cubs.

Roaring Red Sox Face Tigers For Three-Game Bout

Boston, June 7 (AP) — Entering into the important half of their eastern trip after a two-day holiday from the American league flag chase, the Detroit Tigers moved into Boston today for the Saturday opener of their three-game series with the roaring Red Sox, whose pennant fever has carried them to five wins over the Tigers in six meetings this year.

Hal Newhouser, Detroit left-hander who has won his last six starts and stands as the only Tiger hurler to stop the Red Sox this season, was slated to oppose Joe Dobson of Boston in Saturday's single game. Newhouser, after his 10th victory of the year, suffered his only defeat at the hands of the Bosox.

Detroit, which hasn't won a game in Boston or New York this year, tackles the Red Sox in a Sunday twin bill before moving into a three-game set at Yankee stadium.

Going into the critical series with Boston's American league fourth, 11½ games back.

Girls' Baseball League To Draw Million Fans

BY EDDIE McKENNA
NEA Special Correspondent

Chicago (NEA)—President Max Carey, the old National League base-stealing champion, predicts that the All-American Girls' Baseball League will this season draw a million people. Last year six clubs in 110 games played to 450,000. There are two additional clubs this trip, and a 112-game docket is to be climaxed by playoffs. Franchise holders are Fort Wayne, South Bend, Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Kenosha, Racine, Peoria and Rockford.

The teams are managed by ex-major leaguers, a former minor leaguer and a reformed football coach. Bill Allington, who played minor league ball, directs Rockford's defending champions. Rawmeat Bill Rodgers, who was up with the Indians, runs the works in Peoria. Pres Cruthers, who served with the Athletics, has Kenosha. Leo Murphy, Racine's pilot, performed with the Reds and Pirates. Chet Grant, who quarterbacked at Notre Dame and coached the backs under Elmer Layden, has South Bend.

Bill Wambsganss, remembered for making the only one-man triple play in World Series history, has Fort Wayne. Johnny Rawlings, the Giants' World Series star of 25 years ago, holds the reins in Grand Rapids. Ralph Boyle, who led the National League in assists while with the Dodgers in 1934, directs at Muskegon.

Johnny Gottselig, manager of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, is chief scout. Gottselig managed the Racine Belles to the pennant in 1943, the year the All-American League was organized. Some 20 years ago he performed with the Regina Balmorals, a championship semi-professional team managed by Happy Felsch of Chicago Black Sox infamy. In 1939, he piloted the Regina team that went to the final of the world amateur softball championship in Chicago.

Girls' baseball is closer than ever to the masculine game, with several rule changes narrowing the gap between the men's and women's versions.

The new ball is only 11 inches in circumference. Base lines have been extended from 68 to 70 feet, the pitching distance lengthened to 43.

Four years ago the loop started with a 12-inch ball and 60-foot base lines. Pitchers may use a side-arm delivery if they do not release the ball more than a foot from their side. A pitcher may include in her motion a six-inch movement toward the plate before throwing to first without committing a balk.

The double umpire system prevails.

Players are selected for their ability, femininity and behavior. The highest standards of conduct are maintained. Chaperons are provided.

Something along the Mexican League line, players are allocated by a rating system used in spring training and calculated to keep the competition balanced. This spring the girls spent a month in drills at Pascagoula, Miss., played exhibition games throughout southern and western states.

The lowest salary is $55 weekly with the top at $85. Numerous stars are in the top financial bracket.

Three years ago Scout Gottselig discovered and signed Connie Wisniewski, a 32-game winner for the Grand Rapids Chicks last year. Miss Wisniewski is generally recognized as the best pitcher in girls' baseball today.

These gals realy get around.

Salable sheep 100, total 100; receipts too light for market test; all slaughter classes nominally steady.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, June 7 (AP)—Sentiment favoring higher prices was strong in the grain pits today and at one time all contracts of all grains reached OPA ceilings.

Trading in oats was heavy. Opening higher, the cereal moved up throughout the session until ceilings were attained. At that point some profit-taking developed and there was a slight sell-off, but final prices were either at their maximum or within ¼ cent of it. In all other pits, final prices were at ceilings.

Gains in the active oats futures ranged from 2¼ to 3 3-8 cents. July held unchanged at 86 cents. Corn was unchanged to 5 cents higher, July $1.46½. There was some trade in July and September wheat at $1.98½, unchanged, and July rye at $1.58½, unchanged. Bid prices on barley were unchanged.

Inflationary sentiment was stimulated by action of some commission houses in requesting higher margins as a protection on the "short" side of the market. Some buying of oats represented "protective" purchases by traders who were short in other grains at ceilings and could not get out of their positions. Considerable short-covering also was apparent.

Grains in which there is still room to trade were also higher at other markets. All rye contracts at Winnipeg jumped 5 cents, the daily limit. Oats at Minneapolis advanced 1 3-8 to 1½ cents. Trade reports said flour prices in the east were soaring with dealers getting premiums of from $1.00 to $3.00 a sack over ceilings for regular bakery flour in New York.

LOWER TRENDS ARE STEADIED

BY VICTOR EUBANK

New York, June 7 (AP)—The stock market steadied selectively today after five successive sessions of irregularly lower trends.

Buying was based on earnings, dividends, splitups and the belief the recent decline had improved the technical health of the list, but many leaders failed to attract support.

A number of pivotals failed to negotiate a single sale. Chrysler appeared for the first time during the proceedings in the final hour, off 1¼, but later pared this and ended off ¼ at $131.25. Despite individual strong spots, mixed tendencies held at the close. Transfers totalled 1,020,000 shares compared with 980,000 Thursday.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up .1 of a point at 81.1, first advance since May 29. Only 943 issues registered, among the smallest of past weeks. Of these, 411 rose and 352 fell.

Sweets Co. common, up 7 7-8 the day before, added 7 1-8 more at $75, a 1946 top, in response to mounting earnings and split talk. Splitup proposals lifted Monsanto Chemical 2 at $177 and Federated Department Stores 2 at $75.50. Studebaker advanced 1 3-8 to $37.87. N. Y. & Harlem, down 27 points in the preceding session on 20 shares, first transaction since February 19, dropped 13 more at $285 on a 10-share sale. Chicago & North Western preferred weakened in the forenoon in further reflection of the omitted dividend, but came back and ended down 1¼ at $65, while the common gained ½ at $37.

Ahead were U. S. Steel, Goodrich, Woolworth, National Power & Light, Commonwealth & Southern (again the most active), Public Service of N. J., Anaconda, Dow Chemical, Du Pont, Santa Fe, Southern Railway and National Can. Losers included Bethlehem, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, American Telephone, Great Northern, Electric Power & Light, Kennecott, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case and Douglas Aircraft.

BUYING BOOSTS RAILS

New York, June 7 (AP)—Selective buying boosted a number of rails in an irregular bond market today.

Favored carriers were marked up an outside of more than two points in the slowest session of the week.

Turnover of $3,210,000 compared with $3,980,000 Thursday.

The market remained in the same cautious mood that has dominated a number of sessions. Close attention was paid to labor developments.

Closing higher were Baltimore & Ohio stamped "F's" at 87½, Burlington 2 7-8s at 100½, North Western 4½s at 92½, Illinois Central 4s of '52 at 105, Kansas City Southern 4s at 103¾, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico "B" 5s at 104½, and Wisconsin Central 4s (S & D) at 50 3-8.

On the losing side were Central of Georgia Consolidated 5s at 81½, Rock Island convertible 4½s at 32, Detroit Edison 4s at 106 5-8, Hudson & Manhattan Income 5s at 56, Missouri Pacific "F" 5s at 96¼, Norfolk & Southern convertible 5s at 61, and Seaboard Air line Income 4½s at 85½.

Latin American issues gave way over a broad front in the foreign dollar loan division. Turnover was comparatively small but losses ran to a point, exchange and over-the-counter market.

TRADING TRENDS

New York, June 7 (AP)—
Stocks: Irregular; special issues advance.
Bonds: Narrow; some rails advance.
Cotton: Firm; mill buying.
Chicago:
Wheat: Unchanged at ceilings.
Corn: Unchanged to 5 cents higher.
Oats: Strong; short covering; active trade.
Hogs: Steady and active. Top $14.85 ceiling.
Cattle: Supplies too small for adequate trade test; practical top not established.

CARD OF THANKS

Deeply grateful and appreciative of the kindnesses shown us by friends and neighbors in our recent sad bereavement, we hereby tender our heartfelt thanks to one and all. The visitation of friends, The American Legion, the contributions of flowers all contributed to a lightening of our burden of sorrow.
Signed:
THE JOHN WILLIAMS FAMILY.
7298-159-1t

It is with a feeling of sincere gratitude that we take this means of expressing our deep appreciation and thanks to our relatives, neighbors and friends for their kindnesses shown us in our recent sad bereavement, the sudden death of our beloved husband and father, Joseph A. Beauchamp. We are very grateful to Rev. Fr. Laforest for his comforting words and other manifestations of sympathy, the Sisters and students of St. Joseph and St. Ann schools, the graduating class of St. Joseph school, Daughters of Isabella and Holy Name society, to those who served as pallbearers, sent floral and spiritual bouquets, to those who offered the use of their cars, and to all others who in any way helped to lighten our burden of sorrow. Your kindness will always be held in grateful remembrance.
Signed:
MRS. JOSEPH A. BEAUCHAMP,
MARILYN, JACK AND BOB
BEAUCHAMP.
MRS. GEORGE THEOBALD.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks and sincere appreciation to all the kind neighbors, relatives and friends who so kindly assisted us during our recent bereavement, the death of a beloved husband and father. We are especially grateful to those who served as pallbearers and honorary escorts by the Knights of Columbus Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, to those who donated the use of their cars, sent floral and spiritual offerings and expressions of sympathy, and the railroad friends of Ishpeming who so kindly sent offerings. The memory of these acts of kindness will always remain with us.
Signed:
THE FAMILY OF
JOSEPH WOLLERSHEIM.

Rain-Making Device Is Being Developed

Boston—A rain-making machine now under construction here may solve the problem of clearing fog-bound landing fields and prevent many of the fatal air crashes now caused by "ceiling zero" visibility at airports.

The rainmaker sends out sound waves that drive the fog particles together, forming rain drops. The rain falls, clearing the air field. This attack on the fog problem proved effective in tests during the war at the Navy's Landing Aids Experiment Station at Arcata, Calif., where sirens were used to blast the fog, but the new machine may do a more subtle job.

Sirens not only turned the fog to rain but also made personnel on the field sick and knocked birds out of the sky, so the new machine will be able to generate sounds of such high frequency that they can not be heard by human or animal ears.

The rainmaker, being built by Ultrasonic Corporation here, is a high powered sound generator equipped with a wide frequency range for experiments to determine how much sound of what frequency will do the best job clearing different types of fog.

Refinancing Approved For Construction At Escanaba

Dayton, O., June 7. (AP)—Stockholders of the Mead Corp. meeting here today approved a plan for refinancing through issuance of preferred stock and increasing the outstanding number of shares of common.

Stockholders approved issuance of two classes of preferred stock. One will be 100,000 shares of cumulative preferred with a par value of $100. The other 300,000 shares of cumulative preferred shares with a par value of $50.

Common shares of the company were increased from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000, no par value.

Authority was given the board of directors to move the main office from Chillicothe to Dayton, O.

Proceeds of the new financing program will be used mainly for construction purposes, George H. Mead, chairman of the board said.

Approximately $3,600,000 will be spent in paying the Mead Corp's share in the construction of a kraft plant at Macon, Ga. Mead Corp., owns 60 per cent of the stock in that plant and the Inland Container Corp., Indianapolis, owns 40 per cent.

Other funds will be spent for enlarging and improving plants at Chillicothe, Kingsport, Tenn.; Escanaba and Manistique, Mich.; Harriman, Tenn.; Lynchburg, Va., and Sylvia, N. C.

Bonds outstanding also will be retired, Mead said.

Death And Flogging Blamed On Ku Klux Strong-Arm Group

Atlanta, June 7. (AP)—A Georgia assistant attorney general reported today his undercover agents had linked an inner "strong arm" group of the revived Ku Klux Klan with a killing and a flogging.

Dan Duke, who is conducting the state legal department's investigation of Klan activities by order of Gov. Ellis Arnall, said that members of the Kavalier Klub boasted openly of the two crimes.

Publication of the charges in Atlanta newspapers drew from Dr. Samuel Green, a physician who is Georgia Grand Dragon of the Klan, a statement that they were "idiotic."

"Next they'll be accusing us of starting the LaSalle Hotel fire in Chicago," he said. "Or I wouldn't be surprised if they blame us for the maritime strike."

He said every Klansman took an oath to uphold the law and to help prosecute any Klansman found violating the law.

Duke said the crimes his secret agents attributed to the Kavalier Klub were the slaying of a negro tax driver and the flogging by a masked band of a 21-year-old negro navy veteran.

School Bus Driver In Fatal Accident Held For Homicide

Detroit, June 7. (AP)—The driver of a school bus involved in a collision with two automobiles which brought death to a woman and injury to 18 others was charged with negligent homicide in a warrant issued today.

Harold A. Smith, 21, driver of the bus, pleaded innocent when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Jens L. Neilsen of Oak Park and was released under $1,000 bonds pending examination June 14.

The bus contained 34 children who were enroute to an outing at Detroit Zoo when the accident occurred Wednesday.

Bears At Detroit Zoo Get No Bread

Detroit, June 7 (AP)—The cupboard's getting bare and the bears are going without bread.

That was the story at Detroit zoo today as keepers announced that because of the current bread shortage, the bears are going to be fed dog biscuits as a substitute.

The change will be particularly severe on the black and brown bears who live chiefly on bread hash, with a smattering of fish and vegetables.

The polar bears won't mind the bread curtailment, keepers said.

The bears declined comment.

Smoking Ban Kept At State College

East Lansing, Mich., June 7. (AP)—Michigan State College students today turned thumbs down on a proposal to permit them to smoke any place on the campus.

The undergraduates voted 1,703 to 1,501 for continuance of the present system under which smoking is permitted only in designated places inside of campus buildings.

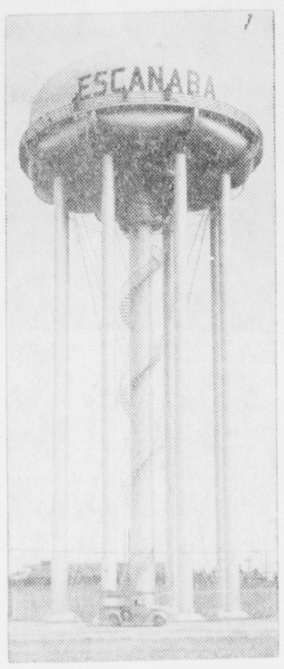
Tom Laring, Lansing senior and president of the Student Council, said the sole exception would be the area south of Red Cedar River, where outdoor smoking will be allowed. Smoking still will be permissible in rest rooms.

NOT ENOUGH FUEL

The first steamship ever to cross the Atlantic was the Savannah. The trip was accomplished in 1819, but the Savannah ran out of fuel before reaching her destination and had to utilize her sails to complete the trip.

NEW SHIPS PLANNED

Eleven of the largest steamship companies in the United States plan construction of a total of 89 new ships to augment their fleets and provide faster oceanic service.



NEW SIGN — Two new red neon Escanaba signs, each slightly over six feet in height, have been erected on the city water tower. One sign faces south and the other north. The sign on the south side of the tower is already in operation but it will require another week or 10 days before the north sign is operating.

Railroad Property Dangerous Place To Play, Boys Warned

The danger to school age children in using railroad property for a summer playground is pointed out in a circular in which Michigan Railroads Association is asking the cooperation of parents, school and police officials to prevent the practice—the cause of considerable loss of life and great damage to property each year.

Many boys and girls are dead and many others are going through life with only one arm or leg or otherwise badly crippled because they "played on the railroad", safety experts stated, and the association has prepared the following list of "don'ts" as a guide to youngsters:

Don't walk on railroad tracks or trestles; you may be hit by a train coming from behind you or you may have your foot caught between ties or planks or in a switch.

Don't hop on, play on or in, or jump off railroad cars.

Don't crawl under standing trains or climb between cars.

Don't play around switch stands and switch lights.

Don't open telephone boxes or handle wires and cables that operate telephones or telegraph instruments.

Don't open journal boxes on freight cars.

Don't put anything — spikes, logs, sticks, boxes, boards, pieces of iron on the rails.

Don't throw stones at passenger cars or train crews.

Don't shoot air guns toward passenger or freight trains or at locomotives or the crews.

OUTLOOK BAD FOR MARITIME UNION DISPUTE

Pacific Waterfront Employers Association.

Afterward, Foisie told reporters that Bridges had rejected formally a government fact-finding board recommendation of a 22-cents-an-hour pay increase for his union. Foisie added that he was willing to accept this boost provided the government paid the cost of making it retroactive to Oct. 1, 1945.

Attorney General Tom Clark quoted Reconversion Director John W. Snyder as having advised the cabinet the outlook was pretty bad. Early developments from various huddles did nothing to dispel the ominous prospects.

Top leaders of the big CIO National Maritime Union talked strategy for a strike set for June 15. They have the support of a $1,000,000 war chest, five other CIO unions, and one independent union teamed up with NMU in the Committee for Maritime Unity (CMU).

Representatives of west coast ship operators refused to dicker now with two of the other CIO unions—Marine Engineers and Cooks and Stewards. They said they would deal with the independent, the Marine Firemen.

Government On Spot

The government itself was on a spot. Its efforts to avert the mid-June strike of the Committee for Maritime Unity have resulted in a clamor for a full-scale walkout of AFL seamen.

The AFL Seafarers Union and Sailors Union of the Pacific say they want to do some talking themselves, to negotiate on wages and hours with J. B. Bryan and Gregory Harrison, president and attorney of the Pacific-American Shipowners Association. Until they get a chance to do that, the AFL seamen decreed yesterday, they are going to have practice walkouts that may lead to an actual strike.

But Bryan and Harrison are tied up in discussions here with CMU spokesmen and government conciliators. They met twice today with the Independent Marine Firemen and the CIO Marine Engineers and Cooks and Stewards. Harrison said they would not talk terms with the two CIO unions.

Bride Ships Put Ban On Tiny Babies

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Infants under six months will be banned from "bride ships" bringing American servicemen's families from the European and Mediterranean theaters, the war department announced tonight.

This action was taken after study of a report submitted earlier this week by the board of inquiry which investigated the epidemic, tentatively identified as infectious diarrhea, among children aboard the army transport Zebulon Vance.

Nineteen infants were taken from the Vance to the hospital at Fort Hamilton, N. Y. Of these six have died. Three other infant passengers from this ship are reported to have died in various sections of the country "from acute diarrhea."

Fishing Party Of 4 Hunted In Canada; Canoe In Whirlpool

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 7 (AP)—Ontario provincial police today searched the Michipicoten river area, 155 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., for traces of a fishing party of four whose overturned canoe was found by a train crew.

Preliminary reports said the group's overturned freight canoe was discovered in a whirlpool at the White Island dam, with two outboard motors and fishing gear intact. The four left on their fishing trip last Thursday.

They were identified tentatively as: Dr. G. A. Ritchiet, a Sault Ste. Marie Mich., dentist; Dr. Roy Beuve of Marinette, Wis., His father and his son, whose names were unavailable.

Colonel And WAC Held In German Jewelry Robbery

war placed easy temptation in their way.

The jewels had been buried beneath the castle in the fall of 1944 when heavy Allied air raids convinced the members of the Hesse family, relatives of Queen Victoria of England, that they would be safer there than in their bank vault.

In April Princess Sophie sought to get the possession of some jewels, saying she was to be married and wanted to wear them then. It was then that the theft was discovered.

The war department gave these details on the colonel and his bride:

Durant, 36, was a lawyer in the department of interior before entering the Army. He graduated from the University of Illinois in 1936 and received his law degree at Georgetown university here. A reserve officer, he went on active duty in 1940 as a captain in the air forces. He has been awarded the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star.

Mrs. Durant, 34, formerly was employed in a responsible position by a resort hotel in Phoenix, Ariz.

Kronberg Castle was completed in 1892 by Kaiserin Friedrich, formerly the Princess Royal of Great Britain, in memory of her husband, Emperor Friedrich of Germany.

The 80-room castle, 15 miles from Frankfurt, was the scene of elaborate fetes in the last century when the Kaiserin's mother, Queen Victoria of England, her brother, King Edward VII, and other royalty visited the summer residence of the ancient House of Hesse.

When the Kaiserin died, she left the castle to her daughter, the Countess Von Hessen, now 74, who occupied it until 1920. The countess now lives nearby in a small house.

A German housekeeper, employed 19 years by the Hesse family, said that possibly the most valuable pieces of the treasure hoard were a string of pearls and a diamond tiara.

The Hesse jewels, according to one story circulated among U. S. troops, were received by the House of Hesse in part payment for the services of Hessian mercenaries who fought for England in the American Revolutionary War.

The House of Hesse ceased to rule in 1866 when it was annexed by Prussia during the war between Prussia and the South German states.

As in the bituminous contract, hard coal operators also agreed to accept federal mine safety standards and inspection. However, a provision was written into the anthracite agreement providing that the federal law shall apply only "where practical and adaptable" and shall not be construed as modifying the safety laws of any state.

On the question of unionization of mine supervisors the union agreed to be guided by a decision of the National Labor Relations Board which will be sought.
